Brandeis Leaves Supreme Court at 82

4 More Cited In Growing Warring Jury Scandal

2 Lawyers on Bail; Juror, Bookie in Jail; 1 of 3 Brothers and Deputy Plead Guilty

The Warring jury-fixing scandal spread at the first day's public hearing yesterday, implicating four more men. Six, in all, were in custody or under bond last night.

Justice Laws heard testimony from the admitted principals in the plot to corrupt jurors and a deputy marshal with liquor, money and promises. Twice he stopped the hearing to order the investigation broadened.

Developments were:

Emmitt Warring, 34, brains of the $2,000,000 numbers gang, pleaded guilty to four criminal contempt charges, expressed "deep regret and sincere apology," took full responsibility and was jailed to await sentence. Warring denied many of the implications of his acts and said he was "shaken down."

John B. Upperman, 57, veteran United States marshal, pleaded guilty to two charges, said five jurors shared Warring's liquor, accused two prominent lawyers—former Warring counsel—of bribing him and was jailed until he is sentenced.

The accused lawyers, Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell, denied the bribery and went free on their personal bonds. Justice Laws ordered District Attorney Fine to draft charges against them, "returnable not later than Friday."

Carl T. Denekas, Juror No. 1 in the second Warring conspiracy trial, was ordered kept in custody after Harry Fine, a bookmaker's aide, said he was a go-between for Warring in offering Denekas $600 for an acquittal. Fine also was ordered held.

Scandal Causes Mistrial

The five jurors with whom Upperman said he drank were indignant but mostly noncommital when asked about the testimony.

United States Marshal John B. Colpoys suspended Deputy Clayton Gasque when testimony revealed that he let photographers see Charles Warring while Gasque and Upperman were taking him to Atlanta penitentiary.

The jury-fixing scandal exploded out of an inquiry into the second Warring conspiracy trial, which terminated abruptly in a mistrial. The charges led back to the first trial last fall, which ended with the jury deadlocked.

On trial were Emmitt, Charles, 30, and Leo Paul Warring, 35, with Gordon L. R. Sadur, their income tax expert, for plotting to defraud the Treasury of taxes by hiding big profits of their racket, which bribed metropolitan policemen to the tune of $13,000 a year.

Upperman Gray-Faced

Upperman, for a decade a familiar figure in the courthouse, was led in. Warring, defended by F. Joseph Donohue, had been free on a $50,100 bond. A week in voluntary confinement had turned Upperman from a florid, vigorous figure into a gray-face man who appeared too weak and tired to sit up.

Donohue read a statement to the court, as he entered Emmitt Warring's pleas of guilty—in which he said:

"Because my client wants to accept the full responsibility for his own acts, a responsibility neither falling short of nor exceeding that which is his, and with no thought to qualify any of the implications raised by his plea of 'guilty,' I respectfully ask your honor to allow him an opportunity to state fully to your honor all of the facts as he knows them to be at such time and in such manner as your honor may direct."

Attorney Walter M. Shea then entered a guilty plea for Upperman.

"I will commit each of you to jail until the court is in a position

U. S. Working With Brazil On Trade Pact

Aranha, Treasury Confer; Loan Seen To Buy Goods Here

Treasury officials and the Brazilian mission headed by Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha began work yesterday on a trade and monetary program designed to bind the two countries together politically—and thus hurl new defiance at the encroachments of fascism.

Although officials spoke of the conference only in general terms, it is understood ambitious plans for improvement of trade between the two countries are under consideration.

One result may be a loan to enable Brazil to buy American machinery or other heavy materials. Any loan, presumably, would be through the Export-Import Bank.

Trade Is Discussed

Secretary of State Hull, following a talk with Aranha, said international trade questions and conditions were discussed in a general way.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau entertained the Brazilian mission and embassy officials at a dinner last night attended by Congressional and departmental leaders.

President Roosevelt, who has practically recovered from a cold which kept him in bed over the week-end, plans to see Aranha today or tomorrow.

Silent on Plane Purchases

Morganthau said at a press conference that the question of collecting private debts—that is, arranging for resumption of service on defaulted bonds held in this country—is not part of the work of the Treasury in studying possible loans to Latin-American countries.

He intimated that such questions would be handled elsewhere.

Brazilian embassy officials denied last night that the question of purchasing a large number of airplanes in this country to establish a Brazilian "air infantry" had come up in talks thus far. They would not say, however, whether this matter would be considered later.

Hull Rejects Arms Parley As Hopeless

Sees Little Chance For Success, Urges U. S. Build Defenses

Declaring that world conditions at present provide no "hopeful" basis for an international disarmament conference, Secretary of State Hull last night rejected a suggestion the United States sponsor such a meeting, and urged that the United States look to the "adequacy of its defense."

Shortly after the White House announced President Roosevelt will leave Washington Thursday night to witness a United States fleet problem involving the defense of the Panama Canal, Secretary Hull declared the United States must be strong enough to defend the "American Nation" against attack.

Earlier in the day, the Senate Military Affairs Committee voted down, 11 to 5, a motion to publish secret testimony taken in its investigation of the sale of military planes to France.

Foreign Policy Plans

Other defense and foreign policy developments yesterday included:

1. Introduction of an amendment to the neutrality act by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, to define as an "aggressor" a nation which deliberately goes to war in defiance of a treaty to which the United States is a party.

2. Disclosure by an informed source that Brazil is making inquiries in this country for the purchase of light airplanes and machine guns in conection with a plan to set up an "air infantry corps" in its army.

3. Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, charged that "persistent propaganda" disguised as "saving peace and democracy," is drawing the United States toward war.

Recalls Other Parleys

Kept in bed for the past two days by a troublesome cold, President Roosevelt was reported "much better" last night and planning to make his scheduled visit to the Navy ma-

Quezon Bids Reich Exiles To Mindanao

Dominican Republic, Australia Offer Havens; Rublee Resigns Post

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 13.—Homes for refugee Jews from Germany in the Philippine Islands and the Dominican Republic were offered today to the Inter-Governmental Committee on Political Refugees which met in London to accept the resignation of its American director, George Rublee, and to receive from him the German government's amended plan for the release of 400,000 unwanted Jews within the next four years.

Rublee feels the mission with which President Roosevelt intrusted him, that of opening negotiations with the German government on the refugee question, has been completed. He is expected to leave London later this week to return to his law practice in Washington.

Sir Herbert Emerson, League of Nations assistant high commissioner for refugees, will succeed him. Robert Pell, American assistant director, will remain as vice director.

Presents Memorandum

Rublee's last task was to present a long memorandum to representatives of the 32 nations on the committee, outlining Germany's latest offer with regard to the Jews. Discussion of the plan and methods of financing it will begin tomorrow.

The readiness of the Philippine Islands to take about 1,000 refugees annually and settle most of them on Mindanao, southernmost island of the archipelago, was expressed in a statement which President Quezon authorized Myron C. Taylor, American delegate, to read at today's meeting.

Dr. Max Henriques-Urena, the Dominican delegate, announced his government is prepared to accept 100,000 refugees of the professional and business classes.

Australia's willingness to absorb 15,000 Jews over a three-year period was reaffirmed by the Dominion delegate, J. S. Duncan.

Dutch Make Inquiry

Lord Winterton, committee chairman, said investigations were continuing in British Guiana and Northern Rhodesia with a view to settling an undetermined number there.

The Netherlands delegate said his country was examining the possibilities in Surinam in the Dutch East Indies.

Taylor said the United States was co-operating with the Philippine and Dominican governments by

Burial of Pius Today

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Feb. 13.—Ancient grottoes under St. Peter's Cathedral were made ready tonight to receive the body of Pope Pius XI in a triple coffin.

Thousands on thousands of faithful passed reverently before the Pontiff's bier in the vast Cathedral while workmen cleared an underground space for the burial tomorrow evening.

The stream of humanity that came in the rain to venerate the Pope was smaller than yesterday's great throng. But worshippers shuffled through the Basilica throughout the day.

Pilgrims Come by Train

The scene at the Vatican constituted the largest public manifestations of respect ever shown a dead Pope in the cathedral, partly because Rome has nearly doubled in population since Benedict XV died in 1922.

Estimates of the number of persons who had passed the bier first in the Sistine Chapel and, starting yesterday, in St. Peter's, ranged from nearly 500,000 upward.

L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, placed the number of worshippers at 1,000,000.

The burial ceremony tomorrow will be broadcast, but the public will be excluded. Only cardinals and other prelates, the Papal court, the Diplomatic Corps, Roman patricians and other invited dignitaries will attend.

Cathedral to Be Open

"The body will be placed in coffins of zinc-lined cypress, lead and elm in the apse before the altar of the choir where funeral masses are sung for the late Pontiff daily, instead of in the choir chapel, as were his predecessors.

It was expected that the cathedral would be opened to the public tomorrow from 8 a. m. until 1 p. m.,

First Lady Backs Move to Open U.S. To 20,000 Exiles

Approval of the Congressional move to allow 20,000 German refugee children to come into the country was voiced yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt.

"It seems to me the humanitarian thing to do," she told correspondents at her press interview.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, has already introduced a bill which would permit entry of 10,000 children under 14 during each of the next two years. A similar bill is to be introduced in the House by Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts.

The plan, initiated by Quakers, is supported by scores of American leaders, including John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head; William Green, A. F. of L. president; Cardinal Mundelein, Bishop Freeman and Bishop Hughes.

Fate of 6 Aboard Missing Plane Remains Mystery

Juneau, Alaska, Feb. 13 (AP).—The fate of a missing Marine Airways plane, with five and possibly six persons aboard, remained a mystery tonight after snow squalls grounded a searching plane, and boats had made an unfruitful quest.

Pilot Lon Cope's last message, at 2:15 p. m. Sunday, said his plane was becoming laden with ice off Grand Island, 15 miles south of here.

On the plane were Cope, John Chappell, E. Eek and Earl Clifford all of Juneau, and George Chamberlain of Anchorage. The plane was equipped with pontoons.

A sixth person, tentatively identified as Jack Lennon, 18, of Craig, was reported to have boarded the plane at Wrangell, between Ketchikan and Juneau.

Slain Playgirl Irish Spy Suspect; Killer Confesses

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—A 23-year-old Irishman was charged formally today with murdering Mayfair's "Black Butterfly" as Scotland Yard sought to establish whether the playgirl was a spy for the outlawed Irish Republican army and had been killed as a betrayer of its secrets.

The accused man, Arthur James Mahoney, confessed he killed Georgina Hoffman, 28.

J. Edgar Hoover To Lead Manton Inquiry Personally

Franco to Exile Enemies of His Regime, Outlaw Popular Front

By the Associated Press.

Burgos, Spain, Feb. 13.—Anticipating a complete victory in the near future, Gen. Franco today promulgated a decree imposing penalties on persons in conquered territory deemed hostile to the insurgent cause.

Exile and loss of citizenship are two of the penalties provided in the decree, which covers activities of Spaniards for nearly two years before outbreak of the civil war. Insurgent officials here said these two punishments were the most severe imposed.

The decree also provided dissolution of all parties of the pro-government Popular Front, and set up special tribunals to determine the civil status of persons in conquered territory.

Persons accused of traitorous acts or misuse of political power prior to start of the civil war and those who subsequently directed or led political organizations opposed to Insurgent Spain are subject to possible exile to a territorial possession or some part of Spain distant from their former homes, and loss of citizenship.

Franco Hammers Central Spain

Perpignan, France, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Gen. Franco today hurled his armies, warships and bombing planes against government-held central Spain in an effort to isolate Madrid before the Loyalists can reorganize their shattered forces.

Franco moved his fleet from Catalonia to Valencia waters to tighten his blockade, bombed the enemy's chief ports and lines of communications, pounded Madrid with artillery and opened up with his guns on the long-quiet Segorbe front.

Westerner Expected To Succeed Liberal

Associate Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis, famed liberal member of the United States Supreme Court, yesterday resigned after nearly 23 years of brilliant service. At 82 he was dean of the nine-man tribunal.

Brandeis, one of the world's foremost Jews and the first to serve on the Supreme Court, gave no reason for his resignation in his two-line letter to President Roosevelt. This read:

"Dear Mr. President:

"Pursuant to the act of March 1, 1937 (the retirement act), I retire this day from regular active service on the bench.

"Cordially,

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS."

Resignation Accepted

Late yesterday the White House made public President Roosevelt's letter accepting Brandeis' resignation. It follows:

"My dear Mr. Justice Brandeis:

"One must perforce accept the inevitable. Ever since those days long ago, when you first took your seat on the Supreme Court bench, I have come to think of you as a necessary and very permanent part of the court—and, since 1933, as one who would continue his fine service there until long after I had left Washington.

"The country has needed you through all these years, and I hope you will realize, as all your old friends do, how unanimous the Nation has been in its gratitude to you.

"There is nothing I can do but to accede to your retirement. But with this goes the knowledge that our long association will continue, and the hope that you will be spared for many long years to come to render additional services to mankind.

"Always sincerely,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Suffered From Grippe

The venerable justice, whose shock of iron gray hair, lined face and keen eyes, made him a picturesque figure on the bench, returned to the court a week ago yesterday after an absence of a month, during which he was suffering from grippe.

Whether this illness, or his reported desire to devote his remaining years to the Zionist movement, had anything to do with his retirement, could not be ascertained. Mrs. Brandeis would not permit newspaper reporters to see him, saying:

"He does not care to be interviewed, and he has no statement to make."

Roosevelt's Fourth Appointment

Justice Brandies' retirement will give President Roosevelt his fourth Supreme Court appointment. He named Hugo Black and Stanley Reed after Justices Willis Van Devanter and George Sutherland retired. Then, after the death of Justice Benjamin M. Cardozo, he filled the vacancy by the appointment of Felix Frankfurter, another noted Jewish liberal.

There is every indication that a Westerner will be nominated to take Brandeis' place. Two names were to the fore in the early speculation—Judge Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and Wiley Blount Rutledge, jr., dean of the Law School of the University of Iowa. Judge Stephens is a native of Salt Lake City, Utah. Both he and Rutledge were seriously con-

Hoover Attacks 'Hallucination' Spending

Urges 1,000 Notables at N. Y. Dinner to Avert 'Full-Sized Dictator'

(Abstract of Hoover's Speech, Page 26.)

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Herbert Hoover tonight declared that "hallucination" spending was the obstacle to prosperity and proclaimed a rejuvenated, resurgent Republican Party dedicated to averting "a rendezvous with inflation and a full-sized dictator."

In the keynote speech of the party's Lincoln Day celebration, prepared for the main dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and a Nation-wide broadcast over N. B. C., the last Republican President told 1,000 Republican notables:

"To restore jobs and agriculture, the fear of men of their Government and the shackles and taxes upon their energies must be removed, in order that free men may have hope and confidence in the future."

The "missions" of the party, Hoover said in his prepared speech, were "the preservation of the principles of dignity and personality of individual men and women . . . truth, justice, tolerance and mercy; economic restoration and insuring peace for America."

The only living former President held that "the first chore of a political party out of power is corrective opposition. Its other great duty is to present to the country a program of reform and forward action.

"With our reinforced leadership in new Governors and in Congress, we are strengthened to these purposes," he said. "New vigor and courage have come to us by the rise of youth in our party."

Hoover ascribed to "a high school of economic romance . . . a school of budgetary magic . . . economic make-believe," the theory that Gov-

WPA Census Of Needs Here Affects 11,800

Canvass Also Calls For Affidavits of U. S. Citizenship

Plans are being made for a thorough census of need among the 11,800 persons on the local Works Progress Administration roll, Ross Haworth, assistant administrator for the District, revealed yesterday.

The census will be carried out, he explained, as a result of the provision in the $725,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill directing the national organization to ascertain need among the 3,000,000 relief clients.

Affidavit of Citizenship

Under another provision of the bill, it will be necessary to obtain affidavits of citizenship, not only from the 11,800, but from members of the local administrative staff as well.

The citizenship requirement, Haworth said, may make it necessary to drop from the local roll between 50 and 100 persons who are aliens or have merely declared their intention to become citizens. The bill makes no exception for the latter.

He said the local relief roll would not be reduced below the present level before April 1.

Present Quota Maintained

"We are going right ahead with our present quota," he said. "Any vacancies created by persons leaving the roll will be filled from the list of eligibles. As you know, there are several thousand applicants."

Haworth explained that, since the bill provides that persons eligible for social security grants shall not be discriminated against, he would, so far as possible, place back on the roll as vacancies occur the 1,000 or so aged persons and women with dependent children dropped for this reason here.

Millionaire Ex-Convict Foils Extortionists Asking $15,000

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—Charles A. Ward, millionaire manufacturer and political figure, tonight was described by police as the intended victim of a $15,000 extortion plot whose authors threatened to link him with the unsolved murder of Walter Liggett, Minneapolis weekly publisher.

Police Chief Clinton Hackert said confessions from two men "completely smashed" the attack on the world adventurer who once worked with Pancho Villa in a Mexican revolution, served a sentence in Leavenworth Penitentiary for narcotics possession and rose to be a respected citizen here as an advertising specialty manufacturer.

Chief Hackert said he had confessions from Mathew W. Stegbauer, 31, released from Leavenworth six months ago after serving for hijacking, and Harold McAvoy, 29, former law student turned whisky salesman.

Paul Contreras, 40, whom Hackert said was an innocent messenger, was held as a material witness.

Detective Inspector Charles Tierney said there was no indication that the prisoners possessed incriminating evidence against Ward.

Ward received a letter last Friday from men describing themselves as former convicts needing $15,000 to start a business.

They appealed to Ward, benefactor to dozens of former criminals and companions from his days as an Alaskan barroom handyman, sailor and adventurer, to help them. They threatened to link him with the Liggett murder should he refuse.

Ward and Tierney laid an elaborate trap for the would-be extortionists.

CAPITAL VALENTINES

There are ten great feuds in Washington, and hundreds of lesser feuds. Some create a vast disquiet along the Potomac. Others merely smoulder. An exchange of valentines among these feudists today, comic or romantic, might help bind up the Nation's wounds.

Mrs. Roosevelt . . . no feud

ROOSEVELT-GARNER: "Dear Jack the Gar: Come along with me and review the fleet this week." "Dear Hog Caller: Drop in some afternoon at my back room off the Senate chamber. Use the family entrance."

• • • •

FARLEY-CORCORAN: "Dear Tommy: I'd like to show you my stamps. Maybe we could design one with Justice Holmes' picture."

"Dear Jim: Why not pop in at my flat on K street tonight? I'll play you 'The Sidewalks of New York' on my accordeen and we can stuff a candidate for 1940."

"—their secret sorrows"

ICKES-DIES: "Dear Martin: If you can stop in at my place in the suburbs some evening I'll teach you a few new epithets." "Dear Honest Hal: A few of the zanies are getting together for a wienie roast. Wish you could join us." (Like a few other Washingtonians, these two gentlemen can keep six or eight feuds going at once. Most of us are one-feud men, though.)

• • • •

BARTON-MELLETT: "Dear Lowell: I was just kidding about repealing your emergency council. Lunch with me today and tell me about some emergencies." "Dear Bruce: Could you spare me a good copy-writer with oomph from your advertising agency? We could use a couple."

Apparently Mrs. Roosevelt is the only person in Washington not now involved in a feud; she is the New Deal's greatest victory, the apotheosis of all the 1934 jokes about the the First Lady. The adoration of Mrs. Roosevelt has become a fashionable parlor game, and she will probably receive more valentines today than any other lady in America. Even Congressman Parnell Thomas wouldn't want to impeach her.

First Lady to Take Life Easy; Finds Lull in Program

Mrs. Roosevelt is going to r-e-l-a-x after all.

Beginning next Monday, she confided at her press conference yesterday there's a lull in her usually heavy schedule to lectures and after-dinner speeches. So, she said, she proposes to do exactly as she pleases and "have a good time."

The First Lady revealed she will leave tonight with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., for New York City, and will attend the Farm and Home Week at Cornell University Thursday and Friday.

Theater Chain Loses Appeal In Price Fixing

Supreme Court Voids Texas Agreement With Film Distributors

The Supreme Court yesterday in a 5-to-3 decision ruled that eight prominent motion picture distributors and a chain of Texas motion picture houses violated the Sherman antitrust law through film licensing agreements allegedly restraining competition.

The majority opinion by Justice Stone upheld a Federal District Court in enjoining enforcement and renewal of the agreements. Justice Roberts, joined by Justices Butler and McReynolds, took exception in a minority opinion.

The agreements overruled by the court were between Interstate Circuit, Inc., which operates the Texas theaters, and Columbia, Fox, Metro, Paramount, RKO, United Artists, Universal and Vitagraph, the film distributors.

Decline Picketing Review

Other action by the court:

Declined to review the conviction of four persons found guilty of violating the law against picketing foreign embassies and legations in Washington. They were convicted by the District Police Court of parading in front of the German and Austrian legations last March 14.

Declined to review the conviction of Manny Strewl and six other men serving prison terms for the kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, of Albany, N. Y., in 1937.

Refused to review the case of John W. Cromwell, former teacher in the District of Columbia schools, who sought reinstatement though the Court of Appeals ruled he was barred from suing on the ground he waited too long—about 30 months—before demanding reinstatement.

Hailed As U. S. Victory

Justice Department officials, who brought the Texas motion picture suit, hailed the decision as a significant anti-trust victory.

Restrictions in the agreements, called "harsh and arbitrary" by Justice Stone, included provision for a 25-cent admission price to be charged by "second run" theaters when showing feature pictures in the same city where a "first run" showing had been given. Stone said this forced increases in price ranging from 25 per cent to 150 per cent. In some cases the agreements provided against showing of such pictures on a "double feature" bill.

"Some who did not yield were compelled to forego exhibition of the distributors' feature pictures," Stone said. "The effect was a drastic suppression of competition and an oppressive price maintenance, of benefit to Interstate and the distributors but injurious alike to Interstate's subsequent-run competitors and to the public."

Justice Roberts Dissents

Justice Roberts in his minority dissent argued on the other hand that "the restrictions in the licenses of second-run exhibitors were not unreasonable restraints of commerce under the Sherman act."

Roberts said each of the distributors "could compete successfully only by granting exclusive licenses to Interstate and injuring subsequent run houses by refusing them licenses—a course clearly lawful—or by doing the less drastic thing of agreeing to protect the good will of its pictures by putting necessary and not severely burdensome restrictions upon subsequent run exhibitors which I think equally lawful."

Justice Frankfurter did not participate in consideration or decision of the case.

Court Recesses

Later the court recessed until February 27, after taking under advisement the case of Joseph G. Strecker, of Hot Springs, Ark., native of Austria, whom the Government is seeking to deport because of one-time membership in the Communist Party.

In concluding arguments, Whitney North Seymour contended the deportation warrant was invalid because Strecker was not a member of the Communist Party at the time it was issued.

Leaders Call Democrats to Stop Defeats

House Rally Today Set for 'Pep Talks' On Majority's Peril

The 261 Democratic members of the House of Representatives—or as many of them as answer their party's call—will flock to an unusual conference in the House chamber this morning to hear party leaders deliver "pep talks."

Concerned over the failure of many Democrats to appear on the floor when votes were taken last week, the leaders have called today's meeting to remind the members "in no uncertain terms" that the majorities of the previous six years are gone.

Immediate cause of the action was believed to be the Republican victory last week in striking from the independent offices appropriation bill a provision of more than $17,000,000 for a TVA dam at Gilbertsville, Ky., and other TVA projects. The clash was accepted by a vote of 159 to 122, with no less than 102 Democrats absent. Of the 159 votes in favor of the cut, all but a handful were Republicans.

Democratic leaders were also disturbed last week by the mere 5-vote margin that sustained a provision in an Administration tax bill permitting the Federal Government to tax salaries of State and local employes. A Republican motion to strike out that provision was defeated by the uncomfortably close tally—on a standing vote—of 141 to 136.

Although Democrats claim that the Gilbertsville Dam will be restored by the Senate and ultimately approved by the House, it was generally admitted that the "Republicans caught us napping."

Furthermore, a succession of appropriation bills will be coming out of committee in the next few weeks and it was felt that a repetition of successful Republican sniping may be seriously damaging to party prestige.

Several Democrats requested the leadership to call the rally to remind the neglectful of their duty to the party. Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, yesterday emphasized that President Roosevelt had nothing to do with organizing the conference.

Rayburn added that the meeting could not be intended to heal a split in the Democratic ranks, because, he said, there is no split.

Another Democratic meeting, scheduled long before today's conference was decided upon, was held last night by a group of liberal Congressmen, among whom were included Representatives Voorhis, of California, and Coffee, of Washington.

The meeting bore indications of an effort to re-establish a bloc similar to that of the "Young Turks," headed last session by Representative Maverick, of Texas, who was defeated for re-election.

Secretary Morgenthau, by special permission of his wife, told yesterday why she got a refund of $1,448 on her 1936 Federal taxes.

Morgenthau.

Explaining it was his policy not to comment on individual cases, the Secretary of the Treasury said he was empowered by Mrs. Morgenthau to say that the refund resulted from a gift tax deduction which she claimed and which the Internal Revenue Bureau disallowed until a later court decision on the point involved showed that she was entitled to it.

The refund to Mrs. Morgenthau came to light in an annual report of the Treasury to Congress on tax refunds.

Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois, announced he would address an audience of "Maryland Democrats" in Baltimore tomorrow on the subject of the Dies Committee.

Keller was one of those who opposed unsuccessfully continuation of the committee, headed by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, which is investigating un-American activities. He said that in his speech he would endeavor "to show how the Dies Committee might improve itself, by getting facts."

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, asked Congress to prevent Federal lending agencies from taking farms under mortgage foreclosures, saying 60,000 had been foreclosed since 1934

The Minnesota Senator introduced legislation which he said would permit farmers who have obtained Federal loans to retain their property and benefit from any scaling down of debts resulting from foreclosure.

Senate Group Assails Girdler On Steel Police

Civil Liberties Unit Sure Executive Knew Of 'Coercive Tactics'

Sharp restriction of activities of company police in labor disputes was urged by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday in a report severely castigating Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the board of the Republic Steel Co.

Proposing Federal legislation that "would confine company police systems to their proper duty of protecting plant and property," the report scores the management of Republic Steel for permitting its private guards—in the period 1935-37—to attempt to break up union organization work through violence and espionage.

In regard to Girdler's claim that he was ignorant of the "coercive tactics" of Republic police, the committee report, signed by Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, states:

"It is difficult for this committee to believe that a responsible official of so large a corporation as Republic Steel has failed to acquaint himself with the labor policies of his agents, policies which have been carried on for several years at the cost of tens of thousands of dollars covered by blind vouchers.

Group "Not Convinced"

The committee is "not convinced," the report said that, Girdler's subordinates assumed the responsibility of spending such large amounts of company funds "in carrying on activities which violate national labor policy, and which negate the word of the corporation's own statements with respect to labor policy without clearance from the highest executive of the company."

The report, which also surveyed use of company police to impede union work in Harlan County, Ky., said that at the present time Congress should not attempt to regulate the personnel and conduct of private police systems, except for the prohibition of "the employment of armed guards of persons who have previous criminal records showing a tendency toward violence or the dangerous use of deadly weapons."

However, the committee said it was preparing legislation to prohibit labor espionage and the shadowing or intimidation of workers in normal times, "and to restrict company property during times of strike." Detective and strike-breaking agencies also would be covered by the proposed legislation, the committee stated.

Harlan "Terror" Described

Examining in detail violation of civil liberties in Harlan County, the committee declared that its latest report from that area "seems to indicate that at least for the time being peace has been restored."

The committee described a "reign of terror" from 1933 to 1937 "directed against miners and union organizers . . . with the knowledge and consent of certain of the coal operators, who acted both individually and in concert through the Harlan County Coal Operators Association." The terrorism was conducted by deputy sheriffs and private "thug gangs" which, the committee said, were paid by the coal operators.

Utilization of company police as instruments of antilabor policy results in violation of civil liberties and the rights of labor, as well as "riots and bloodshed," the report said.

Judges' Ethical Code Provided in Bill

Adds 4 Members to Fit Security Changes To Revamping of WPA

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate yesterday increased the size and powers of a special Unemployment and Relief committee and assigned it the task of revamping the existing Federal relief set-up into a permanent, coordinated program.

The committee, headed by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, was enlarged from seven to 11 members. It was empowered to handle legislation recently introduced by the South Carolinian to place WPA and PWA together in one agency and revise Social Security act payments as a first line of relief.

At the same time, Senator Byrnes modified his request for a new department of public works to handle functions now administered separately by WPA and PWA. He said he would not insist on a new department to be headed by a cabinet officer but would continue to recommend that the two emergency agencies be combined.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, author of a House plan to cut relief appropriations for next year by 50 per cent, limit WPA functions and start turning relief back to the States, announced he will confer with Byrnes in the next few days.

"I think we will be able to work something out," said the Virginian.

Woodrum had opposed the proposal to set up a new public works department with a secretary in the Cabinet.

Byrnes himself moved the enlargement of his own committee and transfer to it of jurisdiction over his relief bill introduced last week. The measure originally had been referred to the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Three members of the Senate Finance Committee were immediately added to the special unemployment group by Vice President Garner. Assigned for the purpose of considering social security act changes proposed in the Byrnes plan, those named were Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, finance committee chairman, Majority Leader Barkley and Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia. Minority Leader McNary, who like Woodrum opposes a new public works department, was added as a fourth member.

A majority of the Senate Unemployment Committee already had approved pivotal features of the Byrnes bill in a special report to the Senate January 14, and the four new additions were regarded as further strengthening Byrnes' hand. Byrnes, who has Administration support on some important features of his measure, said he probably will open hearings late this week.

Representative Woodrum said hearings on his own plan for Federal relief retrenchment will be opened by his House appropriations deficiency sub-committee as soon as work is advanced on the regular departmental supply bills.

Woodrum reiterated that his principal objection to the Byrnes bill was the Senator's proposal to make WPA functions permanent by transferring activities to a continuing agency.

"The WPA should have no public works functions," said the Virginian. "I think it should be kept as a separate agency so that we can deal with it separately when there is no longer need for it. Eventually it should be washed up."

Byrnes said he is interested in combining WPA and PWA principally to stop "shopping around" by local officials who seek project grants and go from one agency to another in an effort to strike a good bargain. He pointed to variant Federal grant policies practiced by the two agencies, which he said his bill would eliminate.

The South Carolinian took particular exception to recent objections of Secretary of Interior Ickes to combining relief and public works functions in one agency.

"Public works is relief," said Byrnes. "I would consider a PWA grant to my city of Spartanburg as much a relief grant as one from the WPA."

Byrnes said Ickes was on record for a new Public Works Department when the President's reorganization bill first was proposed.

Besides PWA and WPA, the Byrnes bill would combine in one agency the CCC, the NYA, the procurement division of the Treasury, and the bureau of public roads. It provides that Federal public works grants to local governments would not exceed two-thirds of costs and the sponsors would not contribute less than one-third.

Besides the four new members appointed yesterday, members of the enlarged Senate Unemployment Committee which will consider the legislation include Byrnes, Clark, of Missouri; Hatch, of New Mexico; Murray, of Montana (Democrats), and Frazier, of North Dakota; Davis, of Pennsylvania, and Lodge, of Massachusetts (Republicans).

U. S. Extends Battle Line in Syphilis Fight

Nine-Point Program Is Drafted to Unify Control by Cities

Publication of a new 9-point program for syphilis control, designed to assist local communities in keeping an adequate check on the scope, effectiveness and facilities of venereal disease control projects, was announced yesterday by Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general, United States Public Health Service.

Titled "Syphilis in Your Town," the control program is set forth in questionnaire form intended to suggest best results from unified action by local groups.

Cure Is Cheapest

"The cheapest thing any town can do with syphilis is to cure it," Dr. Vonderlehr said. "People must learn to consult a doctor or clinic. They must know that drug store remedies and self-treatment are worthless. They must know that treatment begun early will cure syphilis in nearly every case, while if left untreated, the patient is likely to develop brain, heart or nervous system complications."

The new publication stresses the value of blood test and the importance of making this test a part of every physical examination.

9-Point Program

1. Do your State and town have a trained public health staff that knows how to deal with syphilis?
2. Does your State require reporting and follow-up on all cases of syphilis?
3. Are patients in your town assured of good syphilis treatment even if they cannot afford to pay?
4. Do physicians and clinics in your town have access to free laboratory service for blood tests?
5. Do your State and town distribute free antisyphilitic drugs to all physicians and clinics?
6. Is every expectant mother required to have a blood test in your State?
7. Are medical certificates, including a blood test for syphilis, required before marriage in your State?
8. Does every complete physical examination given in your town include the blood test?
9. Has your town an education program aimed at age groups most frequently acquiring syphilis?

Diplomat Says U.S. Sought Anti-Nazi War Bloc at Lima

Berlin, Feb. 13 (AP).—Baron Werner von Rheinhaben, German diplomat, charged before the Ibero-American Institute today that the Pan-American Conference last December at Lima, Peru, was intended by the United States to be "a conference for war preparation."

The United States, he said, aimed to see to it that "the new Germany does not have a single friend on the American continent," through what he described as "unscrupulous agitation."

The baron said insurgent Spain, "will be, we hope, . . . an effective counterweight."

At the conference, he said, the United States tried to see to it that "in case of a world war all America, under Washington's leadership, would immediately and without the 'difficulties' of the last war, openly take sides with Germany's opponent."

Bergdoll Property Claim Is Denied

The Justice Department announced yesterday it had denied a claim for return of property to Grover C. Bergdoll World War army deserter. The property is valued at nearly a half million dollars.

Bergdoll lives in Germany. The property, seized in 1921 by the Government, will be liquidated and the proceeds given to the Treasury. Bergdoll was convicted of desertion in 1920 but escaped to Canada, fled to England and then to Germany.

Surgeon Hits Medicinal Heroin Ban

Dr. Gannon Charges Laws Bar Valuable Cancer Remedy

Protests against the laws prohibiting the manufacture and importation of medicines containing heroin were voiced by Dr. James A. Gannon, professor of surgery at Georgetown University and former chief surgeon at Gallinger Hospital, in an address last night before the American Pharmaceutical Association.

Heroin is one of the most useful remedies in the cure and relief of cancer, Dr. Gannon said, and in certain cases it is the only remedy.

Cancer can be cured if treated in time, according to Dr. Gannon. In some cases a local operation that can be accomplished in 15 minutes is sufficient. He warned against self-medication, adding that "symptoms of the disease are not apparent to an untrained observer until pain occurs, at which time cure is impossible." He urged immediate investigation by a competent physician of all abnormal lumps, warts, and moles, as troubles of this type often lead to cancer.

U. S. Far Behind Fascist Trio In Arms Spending, Says Admiral

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Germany, Japan and Italy are spending six times as much for national defense as the United States, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward today told the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

The Berlin-Tokyo-Rome triangle, spent six and seven-tenths billions in 1938, Germany's share was 4.4 billions, Japan's 1.8 and Italy's .5. The seven major powers spent 16 billions, Russia leading with 5.4.

The admiral commands the Third Naval District.

He said he had refused to discuss the topic first suggested, which was "rearmament," because in this country there never has been an "armament." In 160 years he said the United States never has had an "adequate army of navy at the beginning of any war."

From 1933 to 1938 inclusive he estimated that Congress had authorized 241 Naval ships, including various types and auxiliaries, and an increased aircraft strength to 3,000 planes.

"For your information," he said, "this increase gave back to the Navy less than 30 per cent of the nearly million tons lost by the Washington and London treaties."

The time might come, T. M. Girdler, the steel man, predicted, when the United States would gladly give all the gold in Kentucky vaults for a pile of desperately needed manganese and chromium.

This "time," said the chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, would be war.

He explained that this country is either wholly or in part dependent on Foreign countries for 7 of the 12 important nonferrous metals used in making steel. The seven are chromium, nickel, tin, manganese, cobalt, tungsten and vanadium.

Congress Hears Pope Lauded And Adjourns

Breaks Tradition In Tribute to Head Of Catholic Church

Men of several Christian faiths yesterday paid tribute to the achievements of Pope Pius XI in memorial services on Capitol Hill as Congress adjourned for the first time in its history out of respect for the head of the Catholic Church.

Majority Leader Barkley sounded the keynote of the Senate session as he said:

"In the midst of the chaos which threatens the perpetuity of both religion and democracy, it is appropriate that we pause in the midst of our rsponsibilities to pay tribute to the life of a man who has made so great a contribution to the cause of world peace and world democracy."

Reared a Methodist

Explaining that he came of six generations of elders in the Presbyterian Church and had been reared a Methodist, Senator Barkley added:

"But in the great cause of religion, in the desire for tolerance and understanding, in the accomplishment of the brotherhood of man, we must recognize the achievements of men of all religions and of all races who have devoted their lives to making the world a better place in which to live and a better place in which to die."

Senator Barkley praised Pope Pius for his efforts in behalf of peace, for his scholarly achievements, and for his statesman-like qualities.

"He abated fascism in his own country and communism throughout the world," Barkley said.

Wagner Pays Tribute

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, who offered the resolution for adjurnment, paid tribute to Pope Pius for his "high courage and supreme statesmanship," and cited the negotiation of the Lateran Treaty, restoring temporal power to the church, as an outstanding achievement.

"To the very end," he said, "wrestling with the forces that threaten the foundations of civilization, he labored to preserve freedom of religious worship, the rights of minorities and the dignity of the individual.

"His passing is mourned not only by the 350,000,000 communicants of the Roman Catholic Church in every corner of the globe, but by peoples of every faith and creed. With one voice and one heart, the peoples of the world join in praying that his immortal soul may rest in peace, and that we may soon realize fully that upon this earth the ideals of human brotherhood for which he worked and died."

Wagner's Resolution

The Wagner resolution, read as follows, in part:

"Resolved, That the Senate commiserates with the millions of communicants of the Roman Catholic Church, in this country and abroad upon the death of a prominent spiritual leader who endeared himself to peoples of all nations and all faiths by his untiring efforts to maintain international peace, freedom of religious worship, and the dignity of the individual, against the onslaught of antagonistic forces in every part of the world."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, explaining that he is a Catholic, said that the adoption of the Wagner resolution was evidence of "tolerance and broadmindedness and good will."

He described the Pope as "a great spiritual leader" who worked continually for justice and charity.

Senator McNary, the minority leader, said he concurred in the sentiments expressed by the three Senators.

The Senate session was opened with a prayer by the Rev. Ze-Barney Phillips, Senate chaplain, and the House session by a prayer by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, the chaplain.

The House adjourned within a few minutes after the reading of a resolution by Representative Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut.

Duce to List His Demands on Paris

Rome, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Diplomats here understood tonight that Premier Mussolini plans to let the world finally know the composition of Italy's "natural aspirations" in the Mediterranean when he speaks at Turin next Sunday.

It was understood Il Duce would demand that Italy be allowed to colonize Tunisia; participate in administration of the Suez Canal, and take possession of the French port of Djibouti.

sending technical commissions to those countries.

Taylor said the United States was convinced the world could absorb all German refugees without injury, and without altering immigration laws materially.

He pointed out that the United States was taking German emigrants at the rate of 30,000 yearly and there was a two-year waiting list. In addition, he said, thousands who had entered the United States on temporary permits were being allowed to extend these indefinitely.

The Philippine offer is a continuation of the plan in operation since May, permitting entry upon advance approval of a limited number of refugees whose maintenance has been previously guaranteed by interested persons.

Mindanao Climate Good

Mindanao has an area of 37,000 square miles. Its climate is said to be favorable to Europeans and the island is believed capable of supporting a considerable population.

The commonwealth government, according to Quezon's statement, is already considering large scale colonization projects for Filipinos on Mindanao, and substantial farms are available for general development purposes. The government would welcome refugee specialists, engineers, technicians, doctors and skilled and semi-skilled artisans.

The Quezon government sets the following conditions for reception of refugees:

A plan for financing the settlement shall be submitted by a responsible committee.

The settlers must egree to enter subsistence farming or such other activities as may be compatible with the best interests of the Philippines.

Refugees shall take out naturalization papers as soon as possible until they become citizens, shall reside on the lands reserved for them.

The commonwealth government shall fix the number to be received for the time being.

The plan shall be subject to existing or subsequent immigration laws.

Hitler Offers Terms

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's latest plan for getting Jews out of Germany was understood to have stipulated:

That from 150,000 to 200,000 young "Jewish wage earners" be sent out of Germany as soon as possible.

That those remaining be permitted a certain amount of freedom to work and live, provided the younger Jews eventually arrange to take their parents and other relatives out of the country.

The creation of a trust fund out of Jewish property in Germany from which Jews would be permitted to draw in proportion to their wealth.

Older Jews would be guaranteed against further Nazi anti-Jewish legislation, while the emigration scheme was in operation.

The ceremony will begin at 4 p. m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.) The Pontiff will be taken from the open bier and placed in the inner, cypress coffin. A brass tube containing a script of the eulogy recited at the burial ceremony and copies of medals struck during his pontificate will be placed at his feet.

Once the coffins are closed, one within the other, they will be placed on a wheeled carriage and rolled to the altar of the confession, which is level with the grottoes, down a flight of steps from the nave.

There they will be transferred to another carriage by ropes and pulley and rolled into the grottoes, to the spot which Pius selected beside the tombs of Pius X and Benedict XV, in a little chamber called the Chapel of the Popes.

Pope Visited Spot

Pope Pius had visited the spot once every year, on the eve of the feast day of St. Peter and St. Paul, June 29. On a visit several years ago he remarked, "Some day I also will find sweet repose in this place."

A misty drizzle only slightly thinned the crowd today. The vast Piazza San Pietro, in front of the Basilica, was empty—kept that way by a double line of soldiery. The arriving thousands were routed round it to the doors of St. Peter's by way of one of the encircling arms of the famed Bernini colonnades, each a quadruple row of immense columns. They moved out through the opposite colonnade.

Many Jews in Throng

In the crowd were old and young, priests and nuns, children in arms, hale and infirm. Many Jews came to pay their respects to the Pontiff who had been outspoken against racial discrimination.

Visitors were pressed into the Basilica at the rate of about 12,000 an hour.

While thousands had a last view of the form of the Pope on his funeral couch, the second of nine requiem masses was sung in the apse.

At the same time, Prince Don Ludovico Chigi-Albani, marshal of the conclave which will elect a new Pope, called on the Congregation of Cardinals with 13 knights of the Grand Order of Malta, of which he is grand master.

It was Pius who re-established diplomatic representation at the Holy See of the order—a military order said to have existed before the Crusades.

To Enforce Secrecy

Prince Chigi, who acted at the election of Pius, was charged with enforcing secrecy at the conclave—a responsibility members of his family have had since 1712.

The Cardinals' venerable dean, Gennaro Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte, asked in a reply to Prince Chigi that the knights pray that the church might be given the "holy man needed in these grave times." Reception of Prince Chigi marked the formal start of preparations for the conclave.

The foreign cardinals continued to arrive today. The date for the start of the election conclave depended on the arrival of the American cardinals. Vatican prelates said it could not be earlier than February 26 nor later than March 1. (William Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, the last of United States cardinals to leave, expected to sail Wednesday and reach Naples on March 1.)

Mourning In East

Among the minor ceremonies today was the breaking of the apostolic chanceries mold with which were cast lead seals bearing the name of Pius XI. The seals were affixed to certain apostolic letters.

Mourning extended to eastern churches, largely in the Near East, which recognized his authority as Pope. Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, secretary of the Congregation for the Oriental Church, sent letters to all bishops of the eastern rite asking that they have special funeral services and prayers for the careful election of a new Pope.

The complicated little conclave city within the Vatican walls will be constructed and maintained from a special fund set aside by Pius XI. Prelates estimated it at more than $100,000.

Pope Pius XI was the first to establish such a fund. During the conclave responsible for his own election the college was embarrassed by lack of ready cash in Vatican coffers and had to borrow from outside to hold the election.

It was learned that the Pope had left a will. The contents were kept secret. He was believed to have had little private property, which presumably would go to his sister, Donna Camilla Ratti; his nephew, Count Franco Ratti, and his niece, Marchessa Maria Luisa Persichetti Ugolini.

Only Italians Mentioned

Vatican City, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Januarius Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte, 87-year-old dean of the sacred College of Cardinals, today, in stressing the church's need of a "holy person" to succeed Pope Pius XI appeared to lend support to indications that, because of the world's troubled state, the 262d Pontiff of the Holy Curch will be a "religious" rather than a "political" leader.

Italians, already discussing the possible successor to Pius XI, seemed to reject the idea that a foreign cardinal could or should be placed on the throne of St. Peter's.

The newspaper Popolo di Roma, for instance, discussed the possibilities and named only Italians among the 62 cardinals, including Cardinal Nasalli-Rocca, Archbishop of Bologna; Cardinal Lavitrano, Archbishop of Palermo; Cardinal Tedeschini, Cardinal Marmaggi, Cardinal Maglione, Cardinal Massimi and Cardinal Piazza.

Tradition runs strongly in favor of an Italian Pope. The last foreigner to attain the holy office was Adrian VI, of The Netherlands, who reigned for only one year eight months and six days before his death in 1523.

Of 261 Pontiffs who have reigned in the church's 19 centuries of history there have been 47 non-Italians, including 12 Frenchmen, 12 Greeks, seven Germans, four Spaniards, three Africans, one Briton and eight whose nationalities are not classified with certainty.

A Reporter at the Papal Court:

How Pius Prolonged "Exile"

By Thomas B. Morgan.

Thomas B. Morgan's biography of Pope Pius XI today pictures the scenes incidental to a rare departure from the Vatican; and it tells why a newswriter predicted that departure, revealed some days later, was dismissed when it didn't materialize publicly. The series will be continued tomorrow.

(Tomorrow: The story of Achille Ratti's school days, and his fine scholarship.)

It was while the New York and Chicago Cardinals were still in Rome that a complete social center—playgrounds, theater, gymnasium, classrooms—the gift of the Knights of Columbus to the Pope, was to be inaugurated.

Edward L. Hearn, veteran supreme knight of the order and later a papal count, was in charge of the undertaking which had attracted the Pontiff's personal interest.

When the buildings and grounds were ready, Hearn, soigne in his papal uniform and decorations, was received by Pius XI to announce the inaugural program.

He told the Pope that the two American cardinals would bless the grounds and buildings and would consecrate the chapel.

"And we will be there, too," suddenly interposed the Pontiff to the astonishment of the persevering Hearn.

This was climactic. The former supreme knight was momentarily dizzy, as such an honor for the K. of C. could only with great difficulty be even dreamed.

"And we will be there," repeated the Pope, evidently in an effort to restore the wavering knight to mental tranquillity.

"Then Holy Father," gasped Hearn, "what shall we do? Shall we erect a throne?"

"No, no, don't do that. It will draw too much attention," advised Pius XI.

Hearn now had an event which raised his inaugural ceremony beyond the bounds of knightly comprehension. The Pope's emergence would get banners in all the newspapers in the world. The veteran K of C. would be the man designated to receive him as he stepped to civic soil. What publicity for the order!

On Saturday, April 5, Ferdinand Tuohy, roving correspondent for the then New York World, was taking an aperitif in the lounge of the Palace Hotel, where Cardinal Mundelein was staying. All the cardinalatial ceremonies were over except the inauguration of the playgrounds.

Tuohy had been sent to cover the consistory, but decided to remain until the cardinals left. Into the lounge came a Chicago doctor whom the World correspondent had previously met in Cardinal Mundelein's entourage. The doctor was accompanied by Hearn and when he saw Tuohy, he introduced him to the distinguished knight. A trio was formed around the table.

"So you are here for the World?" mused Hearn.

"Yes."

"Say, boy, I'll give you the greatest scoop you've ever had."

"Interesting," rejoined the cynical Tuohy, though not discounting the possibility.

"Yes, I'll give you the greatest story of your career. Something that will make you a name—historic."

"That's still more interesting."

"Now you can prepare for it at any moment."

"Why not tell me now? News doesn't wait."

"Well, Tuohy, it's only a few days away and I may as well tell you now," reflected Hearn slowly. "Listen! Pope Pius XI is going to leave the Vatican."

"Yes?" There was continued skepticism in Tuohy's tone, but Hearn related the story of his audience and the whole history of the playgrounds. Tuohy was convinced. He left his companions and wrote two columns on the impending sensation.

By pure chance I met Tuohy the next day, about 6 in the afternoon.

Tuohy's Saturday night story had not made the Sunday paper because of slow transmission. It got in on Monday with mine.

Wednesday came. Until noon not a word had appeared in any Italian newspaper and the ceremony was bound to take place. It was scheduled for 5 o'clock All afternoon, cardinals came to the center where Cardinal Hayes and Mundelein were blessing the buildings. A battery of cameras were focused on the improvised doorway to get the Pope in the act of really leaving the Vatican.

I put on a full-dress suit because the presence of the Pope required it. This was a safe-conduct. Hearn ordered all the other newspapermen into a corner and told them to keep as inconspicuous as possible. The full-dress suit had access to telephones, prelates, cardinals and Hearn.

The consecration and benediction ceremonies ended, cardinals, bishops and priests gathered around the improvised doorway in the little courtyard amid the buildings to await the coming of the Holy Father. Finally there was commotion at the entrance. Someone was approaching.

The eyes of all were focused on the doorway. It was time now. He should arrive. Suddenly the spell was broken.

The short stocky form of Cardinal Gasparri appeared in the doorway. Was he a forerunner of the Pope? There was mumbling in the crowd. No one knew what anything meant.

Hearn kissed Cardinal Gasparri's ring. There were no words for a moment. Cardinal Gasparri finally spoke.

"The Holy Father has charged me to represent him at the ceremony as he has decided instead to receive you personally in audience at 7 o'clock," he said in a low voice.

Hearn bowed. He could ask no questions. There was a lull. The crowd sensed a change.

"Shall we visit the buildings, Eminence?" asked the American Knight.

"Yes, let us do that," returned Cardinal Gasparri.

Hearn led the cardinals through the center. A few onlookers followed but the word was now spreading. "The Pope's not coming. The Pope's not coming." The heightened feelings began to drop. The great sensation evaporated into the afternoon air. It could have been only a last-minute decision, for at that moment Cardinal Merry del Val was waiting in St. Peter's to receive the Pope as he passed through the basilica.

Pius XI gave audience to Hearn that evening but it was only to console him and to promise him that his visit was for another day. The reason for failure was announced next morning. It was said that Italian newspapers had carried the story of the exit before the Pope had actually emerged. That violated the Pope's condition of being present.

A month later, I was decrying to Hearn the missed opportunity for a great event. He threw back his head.

"Pius XI knows every brick in the place," he said with emphasis.

He had emerged another day. That was 1924. It was not official until the feast of Corpus Domini in July, 1929.

Tuohy was right. Tuohy lost his job.

Nazis Offer Farm Machinery for U.S. Wheat and Lard

By the Associated Press.

Germany was reported last night to be offering farm machinery, poultry netting and barbed wire in exchange for wheat and lard in extensive pure barter deals with Midwestern farmers' and packers' cooperative organizations.

That barter negotiations are being carried on was confirmed by German sources here and by informed quarters in Berlin. Informed persons here would give no hint, however, of what American groups were involved.

HOW TO BUY FINE WHISKEY FOR LESS MONEY
AS REVEALED BY 960 OUT OF 1,000 MEN!

"Man—what a rich flavor! Say—that's the smoothest whiskey I ever swallowed" remarks Wm. F. Killian, New Jersey Hotel Man, after trying Old Quaker.

"Um! Real rich taste! Judge it's mighty old by the slick way it goes down!" says John W. Wise, Supervisory Timekeeper.

"I'd guess it's right old—'cause it's got that rich flavor as if it had mellowed a long time" is what George Romano, Advertising Man, said after making trial of Old Quaker.

Out of 1,000 Men in Dramatic Survey—960 Find Old Quaker —Now 3 Years Old—a Smooth, Mild, Rich Whiskey, Yet It Sells at a Rock-Bottom Low Price!

● The next time you get ready to buy a bottle of fine, rich, expensive whiskey—do this: Figure how many quarts you buy in a year's time. Then—knock off a dollar for each quart—and total your savings! Here's why we make such a suggestion:

We went to 1,000 men, from 22 states, and poured each one of them a drink of delicious Old Quaker. "Taste it!" we asked them. "Smell it! Swallow a drink of it! Then give us your honest opinion!"

We were amazed at their answer. Not one of these men knew the name, age, or price of the whiskey he was trying—yet 960 out of 1,000 commented on Old Quaker's rich, mild mellowness . . . its delicate aroma, its delicious taste! They proved it a whiskey you'll be glad to drink . . . proud to serve—even though Old Quaker's price is unbelievably low!

Why Not Save Money?

If you agree with these 960 out of 1,000 men—you've made a money-saving discovery. You can probably cut your whiskey bills a third—for Old Quaker, aged for 3 full years in temperature-controlled warehouses, has the taste of expensive whiskey at a real rock-bottom price! Why not see for yourself—and say "Old Quaker"—the next time you buy!

"Tastes like real old whiskey! Goes down the hatch extra smooth"—Frank J. McCready, Grocery Clerk.

Senorita Souza Dantas Finds Americans Are Friendliest People

The United States has the greatest propaganda and publicity department in the world—through the medium of the movies—according to Senorita Olga Souza Dantas, who has the distinction of being the only woman to accompany Foreign Minister Aranha's Brazilian delegation to Washington.

"We see your movies, learn your ways, repeat and learn the language, hear the gay music, see the dances and then we want to come and see the country."

No, she doesn't mind telling her age now, but will in a few years. You see, down in Brazil, we are passing a new law. It is to tax the bachelors and the unmarried girls after they are 25." It is a good economic law, thinks the senorita. It takes the burdens off the families and increases the population so they can escape the tax.

Was Already Here

Her father, Marcos Souza Dantas, is a member of the delegation, and his dark-eyed, viescious young daughter is here because she got the jump, so to speak, on her countrywomen.

When the delegation decided to come, it was a Latin decision, hot and fast, and Senora Aranha and the wives of the other members had only time to say good-by to their husbands; no time at all to prepare to come along.

Senorita Souza Dantas was already in New York, met her father at the dock, and here she is, enjoying every minute of it.

This is her second trip to the United States. In 1935 her father came on a similar mission, bringing his wife and daughter. There were 20 days in this country, 10 days in New York, 10 in Washington, all of them glorious and all too short, says Senora Souza Dantas.

Really Saw Country

Since that time, she has been pleading to be allowed to come back to "the States." Four months ago she won her point, arrived in New Orleans on November 26, and was met by Senor Eurice Penteado, financial counselor of the Brazilian embassy, and Senora Penteado. They motored out through Texas and the Southwest to California, then across the northern part of the United States, through Chicago and on to New York.

Tall, slender, with dark hair curling shoulder length, large heavily fringed brown eyes, olive complexion, the quick motions of the latin and the shoulder shrug inherited from the French ancestry on her mother's side, the Senorita insists that she is—"but ver-ree lazee."

Took Business Course

It seems somehow a contradiction of that to learn that though she appreciates music and art, while the other girls in her convent school were studying those subjects, Senorita Souza Dantas insisted on taking a commercial course and learning typing, shorthand and bookkeeping, reading the classics and latest biographies in her spare time.

She is not an official member of the delegation, but she has doubled for her father's secretary, when the secretary was ill, takes care of her father's appointments and arrangements and is his chief interpreter, speaking both English and French.

She is tremendously interested in the United States and would like to live here always if her mother and father were here too, and feels that Americans are gayer and friendlier than any other people.

The Senorita will be in Washington as long as the delegation is here and then hopes to return to New York.

"Everyone is so friendly here, they give me such good times, not as though it were an obligation, I think they seem to really like me. It is such a big country, so many places to go. I tell you I never saw such marvelous roads in my life and I loved everything I saw."

Duce's Good-Will Cruisers Recalled From World Tour

Rome, Feb. 13 (AP).—A government official announced today the two naval cruisers Duca d'Aosta and Eugenio di Savoia, which started out several months ago on an around-the-world goodwill cruise, will be recalled, "having accomplished a fundamental part of their mission."

They left Naples November 5 for South America, where began a series of adventures, the climax of which was reached at Panama February 4, when crowds threw eggs and vegetables at the Italian minister and Italian admiral.

In Montevideo, Uruguay, the Duca d'Aosta sailors, taunted by cafe crowds who jeered at their Fascist salutes, engaged in several fist fights.

3 Dots Featured in Sorority Play

The three fan girls featured in "Melody Cruise," a play to be given Friday at the Willard Hotel by Chi Sigma Sorority are named Dorothy, or Dot for short. They are (left to right) Dot Smith, Dot Lucket and Dot Thayer. The play is directed by Claud Nichols.

Hull Rejects Arms Parley, Urges U. S. Look to Defenses

neuvers. He will go by train to Florida City, Fla., it was announced, and motor to Key West, Fla., over the new key causeway, where he will board the cruiser Houston. He will be gone until early in March.

Secretary Hull's statement was in a letter to Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, who had urged that the United States propose a naval building holiday and an arms limitation conference to be held here. Stressing this Nation's desire to limit arms, Hull pointed out that only a few days ago President Roosevelt indicated this Nation's willingness to limit arms—in his four-point declaration of foreign policy.

The Secretary recalled that a general armament conference met in Geneva from 1932 to 1934 without having reached a general agreement. He said this conference can be reconvened "when all the powers concerned are ready to halt this disastrous race in armament." Hull also reminded Ludlow that the United States made "every possible effort" to limit naval armament at the London conference of 1935-36.

"Unfortunately," the Secretary added, "nothing has happened since that time which gives any basis for hoping that the obstacles which stood in the way of reaching an agreement among all the principal naval powers have in any way changed for the better."

Following the Senate Military Affairs Committee's decision to withhold publication of testimony on the French plane deal, Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said the majority felt they should "keep faith" with witnesses who had been told they were testifying off the record.

However, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, after a conference with Sheppard, said witnesses who had previously testified in the matter will be recalled. As the committee has since changed its rules to permit members to tell reporters what goes on in the closed meetings—other than matters specifically labeled secret by the committee—the minority bloc hopes to publish the details of the sale.

The $367,000,000 defense bill comes before the House today and should be passed and officially referred to the Senate group before the end of the week.

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, a ranking member of the group, said he "hoped" there would be no delay in the program.

"I am for the President's program, "except that I don't think it is big enough."

Logan agreed with Sheppard that the committee had to "keep faith" with the witnesses who had testified off the record, declaring they "could do nothing else when a man tells us that to publish his testimony would put him on the spot." Pressed for an elaboration, Senator Logan said the testimony in question "might be military secrets or of dissention between the two departments."

Party lines split on the motion to publish the secret testimony. Supporting the motion were Senators Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, its sponsor; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; Bridges, of New Hampshire; Gurney, of South Dakota, and Nye (Republican). Opposed were Senators Sheppard, Logan, Lewis, of Illinois; Thomas, of Utah; Minton, of Indiana; Lee, of Oklahoma; Schwartz, of Wyoming, and Hill, of Alabama, all Democrats, and Austin, of Vermont, and Holman, of Oregon, Republicans.

The vote was viewed in many circles as a vindication of the President's efforts to aid British and French efforts to rearm. One source said a flood of letters from "back home" had changed the votes of several Senators who had been opposing the President's foreign policy.

Paris Unlikely To Recognize Franco Today

Italians Must Leave First, Is Belief; Nazi Mobilization Reported

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Feb. 13.—Despite strong British pressure to persuade France to take the first step, it was regarded as unlikely tonight that the Daladier cabinet, at its meeting tomorrow, will accord recognition to Gen. Franco's regime immediately.

The compromise measure of sending Senator Leon Berard back to Spain is more likely to be decided on.

His mission will be to obtain assurances from Franco of speedy evacuation of his Italian Legionnaires, whose presence in the peninsula is considered by the French to be a menace to their security.

Despite official denials from the Quai d'Orsay, reports of secret German mobilization continue to circulate in Paris. They are taken up by so responsible a journalist as Pertinax today, who claims that by March 6 the Reich will have 1,500,000 men under arms.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 13.—Prime Minister Chamberlain indicated today British and French recognition of the insurgent regime as the sole authority in Spain was imminent and defended British assistance to the insurgents in negotiations for surrender of Minorca.

Under opposition questions in Commons, Chamberlain refused to promise that the House would be consulted before recognition of Insurgent Gen. Franco, asserting sharply, "the government must take the responsibility."

The cabinet may decide wednesday.

(A German information service, Dienst aus Deutschland, intimated Franco had assured Reichsfuehrer Hitler the Rome-Berlin axis comes first in the thoughts of the insurgents as they look for connections abroad.)

Chamberlain said Britain put the cruiser Devonshire at the service of the insurgents last week to establish communication between Mallorca and Minorca and to avert an insurgent attack on the latter, a Balearic island which had been in Spanish government hands since the civil war started.

Orders Disobeyed

An air raid was carried out against Minorca while the negotiations were conferring aboard the Devonshire, despite an insurgent promise they would hold off pending the talks.

Chamberlain read a telegram from the British consul at Palma, Mallorca, insurgent air and naval base in the Balearics, saying the insurgent commander had told him that "this attack was carried out in disobedience of orders and is very much regretted."

Japanese Deny Designs on Hainan

Tokyo (Tuesday), Feb. 14 (U.P.)—The British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, was told today, as was the French Ambassador, that Japanese occupation of the Island of Hainan, off the coast of French Indo-China, was prompted by military necessity and that Japan had no territorial designs on Hainan.

His assertions caused fear Germany now might make new demands on the republic.

ernment spending could balance the budget, that Government loans and public works are a monetary asset and that the Nation's combined public and private debt is no larger than in 1929.

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan told the gathering that "the New Deal is a bubble and it is bursting."

1940 Victory Forecast

"The theory that the only answer to any problem is the purchase of lollypops with the taxpayers' money will sweep away like spent gas," Fitzgerald said. "Labor will come out into the free air which gives every American the right to work his way to the top. Industry and business will regain a place of decency in the eyes of government."

Hoover's address was followed by speeches by John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Mrs. William Henry Hayes, president of the National Women's Republican Club; Govs. Ralph L. Carr of Colorado, Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin, Harlan H. Bushfield of South Dakota, and Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut.

C. Wayland Brooks, Chicago lawyer, was toastmaster.

Brooks introduced Hoover as "still the outstanding champion of freedom of man, freedom of the press, freedom of opportunity."

"He is still the champion despite vicious attacks by vicious men with vicious pens," Brooks said.

Hamilton said the party had passed through a "crisis which imperiled its very existence." He said the 100,000 workers comprising the Republican organization were "primarily responsible for turning the tide of victory last November."

"The man who succeeds the present Administration in the White House," said Gov. Carr, "will face a task such as few humans have been called upon to perform, but its solution is by no means impossible." He said the Rocky Mountain States believe "that when found, that man will prove to be a member of the party which was headed by Abraham Lincoln."

Gov. Heil said "Where I come from, the people are tired of centralization of authority in far-away places—centralization of authority that leads to such things as 'reciprocal trade agreements' that mean our throats are cut by foreign competition."

Connecticut's Gov. Baldwin said his State had evolved a slogan—"There is no substitute for a good job."

Gov. Bushfield of South Dakota said the people of the Midwest "look with disfavor on 'new instruments of power' which have been forged by those in authority."

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of the collegiate Church of St. Nicholas in New York, told the diners that "times like those of Lincoln are grimly real again."

"Enemies from without and from within with ideologies and principles born on foreign shores are ravaging the dreams of our fathers, ruthlessly over-riding their hopes and compelling us to surrender freedom," said Dr. Sizoo.

Justice Brandeis Retires From High Court At 82; Westerner Expected to Succeed Jurist

Brandeis

sidered for the appointment that finally was given to Frankfurter.

Came as Surprise

Justice Brandeis, whose hatred of power and the "curse of bigness" shaped his conduct on the bench, leaves the Supreme Court as a member of a liberal majority—a situation that seems strange when viewed against the background of his appointment by President Wilson on January 28, 1916.

Assailed An Appointment

Wilson had been warned that a fight was coming, but he would not be deterred. When the appointment was announced, there was a terrific uproar, the epicenter of which was Wall Street. Brandeis was assailed as a "Socialist," a "Jew radical," and as unfit for the Supreme Court bench.

The battle over Brandeis' nomination lasted for more than five months, and was one of the big sensations of the pre-war period.

The Senate Judiciary Committee held extensive hearings. Brandeis' critics went through his career with a fine-tooth comb, seizing on everything that would make the nominee out a "dangerous radical," a "violent partisan." However, the shy-looking little Boston lawyer also had friends. David I. Walsh, now United States Senator from Massachusetts, was one of them.

"The real crime of which this man is guilty," said Walsh, "is that he has exposed the iniquities of men in high places in our financial system."

William Howard Taft, later to become Chief Justice, and five other former presidents of the American Bar Association, joined in the fight on confirmation, contending that Brandeis was "not a fit person to be a member of the Supreme Court of the United States."

Confirmed, 47 to 22

When the Senate finally got around to voting on Brandeis' nomination for the Supreme Court, he was confirmed, 47 to 22, with only one adverse Democratic vote.

On June 5, 1916, he took the oath of office as a Supreme Court Justice and was welcomed by his old friends, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and Justice Charles Evans Hughes. Five days later Hughes was nominated for the Presidency of the United States by the Republican Party and left the court to wage an unsuccessful campaign.

Hughes, now Chief Justice, yesterday described Brandeis' resignation as a "most serious loss to the court."

Hughes Regrets Retirement

"His collaboration in the work of the court," the Chief Justice said, "has marked a distinct and very important epoch in the history of our jurisprudence. I greatly regret his retirement."

From Capitol Hill, where Brandeis was a storm center 23 years ago, came many statements of praise, both from liberals and conservatives. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, a conservative, said that Brandeis "is one of the greatest justices that the country ever had, one who had the confidence of the people."

For by far the greater part of his service on the court, Justice Brandeis and the late Justice Holmes made up a liberal minority, and the phrase, "Holmes and Brandeis dissent," became famous.

In 1932, during the latter part of the Hoover Administration, Brandeis wrote a dissenting opinion which many, in retrospect, said was a forecast of the New Deal. He said:

"There must be a power in the States and the Nation to remold, through experimentation, our economic practices and institutions to meet changing social and economic needs."

Devoted to democracy, he once pointed out that "democracy is more difficult to maintain than to achieve." He warned against the excesses of labor as well as those of capital, asserting that "we gain nothing by exchanging the tyranny of capital for the tyranny of labor."

His ideal of democracy, he said, was that expressed by the Italian patriot, Guiseppe Mazzini:

"No war of classes, no hostility to existing wealth, no wanton or unjust violation of the rights of property, but a constant disposition to ameliorate the material condition of the classes least favored by fortune."

Always Brandeis fought monopoly and "bigness" in business, and it was not surprising that he joined with the other justices to invalidate NRA.

"Look at ancient Athens," he once said. "It was no bigger than a county in Texas. Yet how important to the world."

Born in 1856

Brandeis was born November 13, 1856, in Louisville, Ky. His parents, Adolph Brandeis and Fredericka Dembitz, had fled to this country from Bohemia to escape religious and political persecution. The father entered the grain business and prospered.

Brandeis attended the public schools of Louisville and in 1873 went to Germany to study two years at Annen Realschule in Dresden. Then he entered Harvard. By this time his family had suffered from business reverses, and he had to work his way through the law school by tutoring.

He spent a year practicing in Louisville, and then, forming a partnership with Sam Warren, a Harvard classmate, he moved to Boston. The two did very well, numbering among their clients paper mills, shoe manufacturers and Boston merchants.

By 1907, according to his biographer, Alfred Lief, Brandeis had accumulated a fortune of $1,000,000.

In 1891, as he was approaching his thirty-fifth year, Brandeis was married to Miss Alice Goldmark, who was to become a sympathetic supporter in his later "crusades." At a time when his practice was thriving, Brandeis asked his wife if she should be willing to live in a smaller house and do without the services of a maid. He was now determined on a career of defending the "underdog," of representing the poor in the courts and inarticulate masses before courts and Legislature.

Fought J. P. Morgan

Brandeis fought the schemes of J. P. Morgan to give the New Haven Railroad a transportation monopoly in New England. He was one of those who inspired the Armstrong committee investigation of insurance companies, an investigation which catapulted Charles Evans Hughes into national fame.

Brandeis was counsel for Louis Glavis in the sensational Ballinger-Pinchot affair which rocked the Taft Administration. He fought for lower gas rates, and won a victory. He appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission in a freight rate case and so impressed the commission that it subsequently named him its special counsel in a second freight rate inquiry.

After the World War Justice Brandeis became an ardent pleader on behalf of his Jewish co-religionists and served as chairman of the Provisional Commission for General Zionist Affairs.

Throughout his 23 years in Washington Justice Brandeis has followed a Spartan routine, arising at 5 a. m., going to bed at 9 p. m. and working hard in the hours between.

First papers were filed by the baroness—who loses her title when she becomes an American—on February 26, 1932, and were thus within thirteen days of their expiration date.

White Warns G.O.P. Against Standing Pat

Finds Party on 'Brink Of Rebirth, or Rim Of Grave'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 13.—William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, warned fellow Republicans at a Lincoln Club dinner here tonight that "the grand old Republican Party today stands either upon the brink of rebirth or the rim of the grave."

"In this new world, a world of social, economic, political and spiritual change, it is silly to insist that we stand where we always have stood," he said. "If we keep on standing where we stood 15 or 20 years ago, we are going to be knocked into the middle of next week."

Declaring it is imperative that the party define "liberty," he added:

"At bottom liberty is self-respect. Can we have political and economic liberty while 10,000,000 people are on some kind of Government dole?"

He said President Roosevelt heads not a party but an alliance—"a popular front such as they bring together in Europe."

"What I'm trying to say is that if the Republicans must be reborn to survive, the Democrats must repent to be saved," he explained. "Take your choice!"

"Getting down to cases, suppose we admit frankly that labor must come into a new status, a consumer status, if you please," he said. "When we change the status of labor, as for instance Lincoln changed it with the scratch of a pen, we change also the status of all that labor makes.

"That means property. Property rights are bound to shift and change as the rights of labor expand. It is inevitable."

He declared that "labor must be paid a decent wage in honest money" and added:

"If we retain Democratic capitalism, giving the capitalist free play for all his honest endeavors, we must give the man at the other end of the rope free play. And here's a curious thing: If we as Americans try to curtail the just rights of capital functioning honestly, we shall soon find ourselves narrowing the rights of labor.

"That is equally true in reverse. When capital tries to circumscribe the just constitutional rights of labor, capital's wings will be clipped also. Look at the tyrannies of Europe in Moscow, Rome and Berlin. There both labor and capital are on leash!"

Bolan Denies Hines Asked Police Shift

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—A blunt denial by Former Police Commissioner James S. Bolan that James J. Hines requested him to transfer any policemen opened the Tammany district leader's defense today against charges that he shielded a $20,000,000 policy racket from the law.

District Attorney Dewey has charged Hines was a paid political protector of the Dutch Schultz gang and "broke" policemen who harassed the syndicate.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. Then poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

How To Relieve Misery of Your

CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth. VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors.

This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Rep. Smith Again Asks New Bridge, Tunnel Under River

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday renewed his one-man campaign to beautify the southern entrance to the National Capital, reintroducing a bill authorizing $25,000 for preparation of a design for train and truck tunnels and a new boulevard span over the Potomac in place of the present Highway Bridge and railway trestle.

A commission comprising the President, the Vice President, the Speaker of the House and chairmen of the committees on Public Buildings and Grounds would supervise the survey. The technical staff, however, would be under the Secretary of the Interior and would report to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission through an advisory board.

Rep. Randolph to Talk On Vote for District

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, will speak on suffrage for the National Capital at 8 p. m. today at a meeting of the Burleith Citizens' Association in Gordon Junior High School. Officers and members of the Foxhall, Georgetown, Georgetown Progressive and Glover Park citizens' groups have been invited to attend.

Wheeler Asks Broadening of Rail Regulation

Would Let ICC Curb Spending for Extraneous Purposes

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, proposed legislation yesterday to prevent railroads from spending money "for other than strictly railroad purposes."

Wheler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said the Interstate Commerce Commission had aided in drafting the bill, which would materially increase the commission's regulatory powers.

"Supervise Funds"

Chief provisions of the measure would:

Bring all railroad subsidiaries under existing statutes authorizing the commission to regulate the issuance of securities.

Grant the commission additional power to obtain railroad data from railroad holding companies, railway associations, banks, brokers, accountants and railway equipment companies.

Authorize the commission "to prevent or supervise the use of railroad funds for other than strictly railroad purposes."

The Railway Labor Executives Association will meet here Wednesday to consider what, if anything, to do about the President's nomination of J. H. Alldredge, of Alabama, to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Last week, when Mr. Roosevelt named Alldredge to succeed Frank McManamy, spokesmen for the rail labor organization expressed disappointment that the latter had not been reappointed.

German Woman Living in Guiana Naturalized Here

The wife of a naturalized American employed in French Guiana yesterday became a citizen of the United States, although she never has lived here.

Her husband, a native of Czecho-Slovakia, is airport manager for Pan-American Airways in Cayenne. He was naturalized in Los Angeles in 1915. He and Mrs. Filipovich, a native of Germany, were married in 1932.

A. F. of L. to Defer Action Against 'Reds' in Its Ranks

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor executive council indicated today it probably would postpone until its May meeting any action on complaints that communists dominate some locals of the American Federation of Teachers.

President William Green said he did not expect the council would take up in its winter meeting here Vice President Matthew Woll's stand for a "housecleaning" in the teachers' union. Woll warned the federation might ultimately be required to disassociate itself from the teachers' group "unless that body cleans its house of communists."

Green said the complaints of communist activity in the union were all centered in "a few locals" in New York City.

Mexico Seizes U. S. Sugar Lands

Mexico City, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Official Gazette today published decrees putting into effect previously announced plans to expropriate sugar properties in Sinaloa State, largely United States owned, estimated to be worth $10,000,000.

Informed sources estimated the United States Sugar Co., a Mexican-chartered firm almost wholly United States owned, and its affiliates, would lose a total of 250,000 acres.

2 Lawyers, Juror, Bookie Cited in Growing Warring Scandal; One of Three Brothers and Deputy Enter Pleas of Guilty to deal with you in the matter of sentence," Justice Laws said. He added he had taken pains not to inform himself about the evidence so he would not disqualify himself to act in a judicial capacity and directed District Attorney Pine to call his witnesses.

Attorneys Resigned From Case Deny All Charges; Free on Bond

At Pine's elbow were Assistant District Attorneys Fihelly and Wilson. They sent Upperman to the stand.

Upperman testified he had been a deputy marshal nearly 12 years and was in charge of the Warring juries. He said Emmitt Warring met him in a hall and said "he was going to send me some stuff."

"I thought it might be whisky," explained Upperman.

Says He Asked Money

The gray-faced marshal gave his testimony in a voice so feeble that it was often inaudible 10 feet away. He rested an elbow on a side of the stand and bowed his head on a hand. Tears filled his eyes frequently in the first half hour of testimony.

"I went to see Mr. Whelan," said Upperman, "and told him I had to get $150. I had a note due. He said he would see what he could do and maybe if things worked out right he would see the 'little fellow.'" This meant Emmitt Warring, Upperman said.

Says Both Lawyers Paid

"Mr. O'Connell met me one night and asked me how I was making out over at the hotel and I told him 'all right' and he gave me $10," said Upperman.

After the first trial ended with a hung jury after three weeks of hearings and 82 hours of deliberation, Upperman said, he saw Whelan.

"Mr. Whelan gave me the $100 and told me he was sorry I couldn't get any more but that was all the 'little fellow' had," said Upperman.

This, he said, was about December 20, at Whelan's office in the Columbian Building, and the money was in $10 and $5 bills.

Later, said Upperman, Whelan told him to "look out for him" at the second Warring trial.

Upperman said he could not remember the names of the jurors he said drank Warring's liquor with him at the second trial. He refreshed his memory by looking at the statement he signed. Then, one by one, prodded by questions between each, he gave the names, Torrens, Boutelier, Shreve, Key and Irvin.

This is what members of the second jury by those names had to say:

Samuel F. Shreve, 32, garage proprietor, 2901 Connecticut avenue—"You didn't hear Mr. Upperman say anything of the kind and I have no statement to make."

George Boutelier, 56, painter, 133 Quincy street northwest, an alternate juror—"I don't advise you to print Upperman's statement. I'm certainly not saying anything about it."

Malcolm V. Irvin, 35, clerk, 4035 Twentieth street northeast—"That's a wrong statement. But I'm not going to deny it or say anything about it."

Paul S. Torrens, 37, clerk, 4115 Garrison street northwest—"If Upperman only named five, that was conservative. He could have named many others. Sure, I took a drink. Wouldn't you if somebody offered it to you?"

William H. Key, 39, supervisor, 3726 Connecticut avenue: "I wouldn't say that I or anybody else drank Mr. Upperman's liquor." (Question—You mean you don't know whether the liquor you drank was Upperman's or not?) "Yes. That's right. I have nothing to say about the whole matter."

Lawyer Whelan Interrupts

Upperman slowly gained composure as he talked. "It was the first time" he ever did anything of the sort, he declared firmly.

Upperman's direct examination concluded with his avowal that he was not induced to confess by either threats or promises.

Whelan asked permission to interrupt the proceedings with a statement for himself and O'Connell. He recited their 18-year unblemished record at the bar and said Upperman's statements were "false and knowingly false." He asked to be sworn so he could deny the charges and said he did deny them absolutely and categorically, "on my honor as a lawyer and an officer of the court."

"I'll have to direct the district attorney to lay a rule on you and Mr. O'Connell," the court replied. Pine suggested that the attorneys go free on their own bonds.

Justice Laws said he would not prejudge the lawyers' case and that they would have every opportunity to defend themselves.

Attorneys Issue Statement

Whelan and O'Connell supplemented the open court declarations with a statement last night which said, in part:

"The first time that we were apprised that there was any charge of misconduct on our part was when we heard what Mr. Upperman said in open court.

"In view of the statements made by Mr. Upperman in today's proceedings in the Warring case, we request, in fairness to ourselves, that judgment be reserved on these accusations until we have had an opportunity to refute them before the proper tribunal.

"Our conduct before the courts of the District of Columbia, over a period of 18 years, has been in accord with the highest canons of our profession. Our conduct in the Warring case, and in every other case in which we have appeared as counsel, can be subjected to the closest scrutiny by anyone without any fear on our part . . .

"We are confident the assertions of Mr. Upperman wil have been proved to be utterly false."

Donohue cross-examined Upperman, who said he had known Warring only since the first trial. "Isn't it a fact," asked Donohue, "that Emmitt Warring had given you money before?"

Upperman was silent half a minute, as though thinking. "Mr. Upperman," said Justice Laws, "I don't think you need to reflect to answer that question."

"Yes," whispered Upperman. He admitted getting money from Warring twice before the first trial. That was when Charles Warring and Sam Beard were being taken to Atlanta Penitentiary.

Whelan, said Upperman, did not urge him to plead with his jurors for the Warrings. Upperman said he and Deputy Marshals Crawford and Gates called on Whelan Christmas Eve and got $5. This was an old courthouse custom, he said.

Justice Laws said he wanted to hear what Emmitt Warring had to say about Upperman's testimony.

"I gave him money whenever he told me he needed it; I never refused him," said Warring, of Upperman. He said it was never more than $20, usually $5 or $10. He said he never told his lawyers about these gifts.

Warring said his telephone had been tapped since January 5, according to Thomas Harrison Quinlan, who is the man alleged to have been asked by Warring about the chance of fixing two prospective jurors.

Warring said it was he and not Whelan who gave Upperman the $100 and said it was a $100 bill, paid in the lobby of the Columbian Building.

Michael Broderick, a deputy marshal who is off duty until charges of fighting with policemen are disposed of, had been to his home, Warring said. The prosecutors said they did not believe Broderick was involved in the jury fixing.

Two in Voluntary Custody

Assistant District Attorney Wilson questioned Harry Fine, who told of taking to Juror Carl T. Denekas, 43, power company employe, 106 Varnum street northwest, an offer from Warring of $500 or $600 for an acquittal at the second trial. Fine first denied he asked Waring for any money for himself, but Donohue brought out in cross-examination an admission that Fine had asked for money and spurned $100.

Fine said the race horse bookmaker he worked for operated in Prince Georges County.

Fine and Denekas have been in voluntary custody. Justice Laws ordered that if they raised any objection to this he was to be notified. "I prefer that they remain in custody," the court said.

Fine may resume testimony today. Other witnesses will include Quinlan, Charles Edward Quillin, another telephone company employe, and Denekas. Warring then will resume the stand to tell his side of the charges involving Denekas.

The President Can Help

On several recent occasions President Roosevelt has manifested keen interest in the District of Columbia and its affairs. He is especially eager to see the District government reorganized in the interests of efficiency and economy. Hence, it is reasonable to suppose that he will have something further to say on that subject before Congress settles down to work on legislation recommended by the Griffenhagen report.

Those Congressmen most conversant with local issues are on the whole well pleased by the plans of the experts to create a genuine municipal government here. No doubt the set-up proposed by E. O. Griffenhagen and associates has attracted equally favorable attention at the White House. For it would put into effect for Washington a centralized administrative system comparable to that proposed by Mr. Roosevelt for the Federal Government. In both cases the primary objective is to eliminate overlapping functions, waste effort and confusion resulting from the uncoordinated activities of separate governmental agencies working in similar fields.

A special message by the President on the Griffenhagen report would give that local reorganization plan a tremendous boost. There seems to be little or no question as to approval of the general plan suggested by the experts so far as the Congressional leaders in District legislation are concerned. But if the report is to obtain the attention it deserves from the House and Senate as legislative bodies, a Presidential message may be essential. In any event, a lead from Mr. Roosevelt would be of inestimable value in pressing this urgent reform.

Unfortunately, the President is still confined to his bed with the grippe. His illness is keenly regretted. But if it has provided an over-burdened executive with opportunity to examine the Griffenhagen report, the District may be the beneficiary of the ill wind which carried the present semi-epidemic of respiratory disorders to the White House. In the event the President has not yet read the report, he will undoubtedly do so at his first opportunity. If that document inspires him to send a special message on the same subject to Congress, his service to the cause of good government in Washington will long be gratefully remembered.

A Bipartisan Move

Humanitarianism in the United States knows no party lines or sectarian divisions. This is borne out by the fact that a companion bill to that introduced in the Senate by Senator Wagner for the admission of a certain number of German refugee children in the next two years has been introduced in the House by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers.

Senator Wagner is a Democrat; Representative Rogers a Republican. But the desperate plight of the youthful unfortunates who find themselves for racial, religious or political reasons unwelcome and unwanted in the Third Reich touches no partisan chords.

Indeed, with regard to this question other than political divisions tend to disappear. The proposal on behalf of the German refugee children of 14 and younger has the indorsement of both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., of Catholics and Protestants alike. Thus, recently, a group of prominent clergymen of leading denominations presented a petition at the White House calling on all Americans to join together "without regard to race, religion or creed in offering refuge to children as a token of our sympathy and as a symbol of our faith in the ideals of human brotherhood."

Among the many signatories of this petition are Cardinal Mundelein, Bishop James E. Freeman, the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel, of New Orleans; Archbishop John T. Cantwell, Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, the Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, of Catholic University, Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder.

Great Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, France and other countries have already hearkened to the appeal sent out on behalf of the refugee children of the Third Reich. In this great work of mercy, the United States cannot afford to be behindhand.

Attacks On The Press

If denunciation of the press is now a settled policy of the Administration, as the frequency of official attacks would seem to indicate, a certain clarification of the issues involved is in order. The President's recent assertion that some newspaper owners are deliberately misrepresenting facts, like Secretary Ickes' charge that "our press is not as free as it should be in a democracy," constitute serious accusations. The public, and the press, is entitled to a bill of particulars.

These particulars neither the President nor the Secretary of the Interior have given. Mr. Roosevelt's charges, springing from news reports as to what occurred at his conference with the Senate Military Affairs Committee on January 31, were misdirected, to say the least. It is doubtful that a single major newspaper owner knew anything about the "Rhine frontier" story before it was printed. And if the report was tendencious the ultimate responsibility would seem to trace to the unnecessary secrecy which has surrounded the entirely legitimate negotiations for the sale of military planes to France.

Secretary Ickes, while claiming that his charges against the press are "specific," actually uses the same misleading generalizations as does the President. At the New York Town Hall last month, and before the National Lawyers Guild in Chicago last week, he asserted "that a section of the press has financial affiliations which limit its freedom; that it is influenced by advertisers; that it is unfair to certain groups of citizens, especially working men." Except for his admitted "overstatements" on which Mr. Ickes has now recanted, the chief basis of these assertions seems to be opposition encountered by the Tugwell Pure Food and Drug Bill of 1933.

Since The Post indorsed the main objectives of this particular piece of legislation it is permissible for us to assert that Mr. Ickes exaggerates on this as on other points. The Secretary of the Interior said last week that because Mr. Tugwell "had the temerity to support a bill that would protect the people from deleterious and poisonous drugs and cosmetics he was lampooned, ridiculed and lied about by a press subservient to the advertising interests until he quit the Government service."

No reflection on the sensitive and shrinking nature of Mr. Tugwell is involved in suggesting that he himself would admit there were other factors than press criticism behind his decision to exchange a Government post for an executive position in a molasses company.

By his overstatement, both admitted and demonstrated, Secretary Ickes is doing injustice to the cause he noisily seeks to serve. The American press has serious defects of which most of those responsible for its conduct are keenly aware. In no profession is there more constant effort to remedy shortcomings. Indeed, the most effective part of Mr. Ickes' charges is the self-censure of publishers and editors which he quotes. But to pretend that a commercial press is necessarily a venal press, as the Secretary implies, is sheer and dangerous nonsense.

As far as one can gather, Mr. Ickes' basic complaint is directed against the profit motive in a capitalistic press. This, he feels, "limits its freedom," subjects it to "influence by advertisers," makes it "unfair" toward "working men." There is, of course, danger of all these abuses and many others. But Mr. Ickes' technique is to make it appear that the existence of temptation automatically involves surrender thereto.

If conditions were as bad as Mr. Ickes suggests it would be logical to argue for governmental control, as in Russia or Germany. But at this point the Secretary of the Interior shrewdly draws the line. "The very idea," he says, "is abhorrent to me." And beyond that Mr. Ickes agrees that "no fair-minded person would deny that American newspapers are still the best, as they are the freest, in the world."

Why, then, the protracted campaign of abuse from Administration sources? Why the repeated official effort to give the impression that any printed criticism of the New Deal is inspired by unworthy or discreditable motives? Mr. Ickes quotes an assertion that "the modern newspaper publisher and his representatives can dish it out, but cannot take it." One is left with the impression that it would be as proper to make the same accusation against the Administration.

Job For Mr. Randolph

The overworking of nurses, the crowding and neglect of patients, the ever-present danger of fires at Gallinger Municipal Hospital constitute an old, old story. Washington is well aware of these deficiencies in the hospital service it provides for people unable to pay for such care. To read the reports of Supt. Bocock and F. C. Smith is merely to review data that has become stale through frequent repetition.

The hopeful aspect about the current retelling of this story is that it has made a deep impression upon Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee. If he can, in turn, make the House understand the gravity of some conditions existing at Gallinger, the hospital could be quickly brought up to standard. Mr. Randolph could not more appropriately begin his service as chief legislator for the District in the House than by rescuing Gallinger from the sorry state into which it has fallen.

Trail Of A Racket

The numbers racket in Washington has suffered what may well prove to be a fatal blow. But the reverses encountered by this illegal business came only after its corrupting influence had reached to the very machinery of justice. That shocking revelation should end for all time the naive belief of some citizens that playing the numbers is a harmless pastime.

In his statement first calling attention to charges of jury tampering, Judge Laws took note of the Warring brothers' claim for deductions from taxable income because of "bribes to police officials." Now Emmitt Warring himself has admitted to the court that he gave various sums of money to the deputy marshal in charge of the jury which tried him for income tax frauds. His testimony, added to that of the bribed deputy marshal, shows that liquor furnished by Warring was consumed by some of the jurors while deliberating upon the charges against him.

In the light of facts now known the first trial of the Warring brothers is revealed as wasted time. All of the conscientious efforts of District Attorney Pine and Judge Laws to secure justice by a fair presentation and analysis of the evidence were undermined. Assigned to the task of guarding the jury against outside influence, the deputy marshal not only gave some of its members liquor from one defendant, but also informed the jurors that the Warring brothers were "not bad fellows."

The evidence in both the tax case and the contempt of court proceedings suggests that bribery is routine technique for Emmitt Warring. It is the apparent success of this bribery over a long period which is the really shocking aspect of the case. Admittedly a huge gambling enterprise has been operated by the Warring brothers. But they have never been haled before the court on gambling charges. Although Deputy Marshal Upperman used his influence with the first jury which tried the Warrings on income-tax charges, the jury disagreed without reporting any irregularities.

Apparently the community has been asleep while the laws have been flouted and the process of justice perverted. That is a really alarming situation. It calls for a vigorous pursuit of every clue until the whole picture of corruption is exposed. As for Warring's former attorneys, accused by Upperman of giving him money during and after the trial, judgment must be reserved until their cases have been heard.

District Attorney Pine is entitled to a great deal of credit for the alert and skillful manner in which the case has been handled. And Judge Laws has given full co-operation, while preserving a judicial attitude and protecting every right of the defendants. Their responsibility in the case may soon be discharged. But that of the community is just beginning to be felt. The seemingly defunct numbers racket must be kept under control and every suspicion of corruption among officers of the courts must be removed.

And So Are You

Well, here it is St. Valentine's Day, all in the morning betime, and doubt not, dear reader, that we are thinking rose tinted and lace edged thoughts of you. If you would like them expressed in a neat little quatrain or smart little epigram, we shall be glad to attend to that as soon as we have a spare moment to step into the drugstore or telegraph office to pick out something appropriate.

Perhaps if we labored hard enough we might patch up something at once very pretty and quite original, though the ground has been raked over and over. But in that case we might be tempted to send it instead to that concern in New York which is said to publish between 40,000,000 and 60,000,000 Valentines each year and to pay 50 cents a line for good juicy texts.

There is a great deal to be said for these machine-made sentiments that swell and sweeten the postmen's bags and give the messenger boys' hats a scent of roses and forget-me-nots. No lover so shy, no swain so backward, no heart so timid he cannot buy the voice of love for a few pennies.

How different in those days when each poor love had to write his own Valentine. What biting of quills, what ruffling of hair, what protruding of tongues. How many sweet passions turned to gall on the fifteenth sheet of foolscap can never be told.

All gratitude, then, to these professional John Aldens who never, never speak for themselves.

In a theatrical magazine a crooner advertises that he is at liberty. This goes to show what a tolerant people we are.

"One of the compensations of old age is that one can do as one pleases," asserts a writer. Yes, but one so seldom feels like it.

According to an explorer, a lion will not bother you if you carry an open umbrella. That might depend, don't you think, on how fast you carry it?

Letters to the Editor

St. Valentine: New Style

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Once on a time some of the signs
Of spring were pretty valentines;
For on this day, so Chaucer states,
The little birds would choose their mates.

A lover on this day of days
Was wont to lift his voice in praise
Of some incomparable She
And long for reciprocity;

And to this end, with Cupid's aid,
A dainty little verse he made—
Winged arrows custom would not stale;
And Cupid shot them through the mail.

Ay, many stirring tales were told
With February two weeks old;
But now 'tis very plain to see
It isn't what it used to be.

The little birds are gas-propelled
And with their eggs the land is shelled.
The lover sings no love songs for
His mind is filled with thoughts of war;

And Cupid, being dispossessed
By Mars with hair upon his chest,
Now fears, ere propaganda ceases,
To see the peace all shot to pieces.

Advice And Consent

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the interest of better democratic government, it is to be hoped that the question of control of Federal patronage raised in the Roberts case will continue to receive the attention that its importance deserves until it is rightly settled.

The language of the Constitution is perfectly clear that the duty of nomination is exclusively the prerogative of the President. He is under moral obligation to nominate the one who is most fit. Of this fitness he is the sole judge. When the nomination is placed before the Senate it, as a body, must advise the President and give its consent, after which the President must appoint the officer.

The Senators in advising and consenting are individually under moral obligation to vote for or against the nomination as their best judgment may indicate the fitness or unfitness of the nominee. This in good conscience as public servants becomes their duty.

The Senate has neither moral nor constitutional right to delegate the right and power to advise and to consent to any part of the members of the body. If it does so, it changes the method of appointment prescribed by the Constitution. The act in such case is arbitrary and without authority of law. It violates the obligation to support the Constitution.

An Answer From Cleveland

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Cleveland: The Forest Denuded," was the title of an article that appeared in the December 26 issue of The Post. It was a severe indictment of Cleveland, and some of us have felt that it deserved an answer—not a rebuttal, for most of the charges are too true; but at least an indication that Cleveland is not as complacent in its disorder and dirt as Mr. Hall believes.

Mr. Hall says that the Clevelander, in talking of his city, will "point to anything, in fact, save the essential disgrace that the central needs of decent human living, clean air and maximum sunlight, are impossible to find." On the contrary, it is because many Clevelanders have been pointing at this disgrace—a disgrace that smoke is not alone responsible for—that we now have three large public housing developments fully tenanted and several more under development, proportionately more than comparable American cities.

And the smoke survey that showed us up so badly was initiated by Clevelanders—Greater Clevelanders—not by the Government. It is being followed up by a new and enforceable smoke ordinance, and an educational campaign through which we plan to teach the "scores of thousands of small householders" how to save money by burning their coal smokelessly—using proper firing methods and proper equipment. Cleveland refuses to admit that "the smoke problem does not seem soluble."

Mr. Hall also charges that we have misused our greatest health and recreation asset, Lake Erie. We have; we were guilty; but we are no longer. Our new treatment plants eliminate almost all pollution from sewage, and extensive plans are under way for the development of bathing beaches, small boat harbors and other public uses of the lake front.

In particular, the Cleveland park system, which was designed several decades ago, is being entirely reconstructed to meet present day needs for recreation space. The program of our park department includes not only the improvement of city property, but also the replanting and care of street trees—to help us back to our old name of "Forest City."

The disunity of Greater Cleveland, the great number of independent, wealthy suburbs, was cited in the article as preventing this kind of accomplishment, and standing in the way of a solution of problems—regional in scope—in matters of living conditions, housing, smoke control and city planning. It is true that this lack of political unity is a hindrance. It is true also that a consolidation of local governments is likely to take place. Very recently an active region-wide group submitted for referendum a county charter to establish a unified system of municipal government, which was only narrowly voted down. Interest in formal coordination of our many units is increasing.

In the meantime, two years ago, the Regional Association of Cleveland was formed, to take the lead in informally coordinating these elements and rebuilding the feeling of a community throughout metropolitan Cleveland. This group represents Bratenhal as well as the slums; and it has set itself to bring about the comprehensively planned redevelopment of our region as a "true city." Its activities include regional and neighborhood planning, zoning revision, public and private housing programs—as well as smoke abatement. And its work is already bearing fruit.

We admit that Cleveland, physically, is in bad shape. But so are all big cities.

Even now, Cleveland offers better living conditions for the majority of its people than New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and several others. That is no great boast. But I want to say to Mr. Hall that we of Cleveland do recognize what is wrong, and we are doing as much or more than any other metropolitan area to make it right—to make Cleveland again the "Forest City."

JOHN T. HOWARD,
Technical Director, Regional Association of Cleveland.
Cleveland, Feb. 8.

Amlie And The Railroads

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial on the Griffenhagen report you say in part: "In any event, citizens who have protests to make should carefully examine the report to make certain that their criticism is justified before unloosing a blast that might prejudice the uninformed."

This excellent counsel applies equally to consideration of other public questions, among them the Amlie appointment. If newspaper editors, columnists, cartoonists had carefully and impartially examined the record of Thomas R. Amlie before unloosing their blasts, they might not have joined the cabal against him and thus prejudiced the uninformed.

If they had carefully and dispassionately considered the factual evidence of a contracting economy, they would not have lampooned his statement that the capitalist system is breaking down. If they had objectively examined his industrial expansion bill, they would have seen that it is a measure short of socialism designed to revive capitalism by promoting full production and employment within the framework of private enterprise.

If they looked at our economic system realistically, they would see that ours is a mixed economy, partly individualistic and partly collectivistic (TVA, postoffice, schools, roads), and that the inexorable historical trend is toward widening the area of collective action, a trend sanctioned by the Supreme Court in numerous decisions and enforced by technology.

If they were candid, they would recognize that Government ownership of railroads is coming in America as public ownership of other public utilities has come, and that it will then be helpful to have on the Interstate Commerce Commission an incorruptible man who will not sabotage public operation.

GEORGE B. GALLOWAY.
Washington, Feb. 8.

'The American Way'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is evident from the present tendency in national affairs that what our country needs is not only a new administration to execute the laws but a new Congress that has some semblance of statesmanship.

The departure from the American way is becoming more and more apparent; so much so, indeed, that if the tendency is not checked a state of affairs will ere long exist here that is now in existence in Europe. That this departure from the ways of our fathers and our established traditions is sure to end in disaster there is little doubt in the minds of discerning people.

That the United States has declined morally, politically and spiritually under the New Deal no fair-minded observer will deny. One of the evil signs is the desire to cater to ecclesiastical influences, evidently for the purpose of securing political support in American affairs.

Clericalism is at the bottom of much of the trouble in Europe at this time, and unless the people are alert to put the stamp of disapproval on the designs of politicians here in our own country the chances of being governed by a dictator may be nearer than many suppose. The election in 1940 is more than likely to decide the question whether we as a people are to continue under a free government or are to bow to the will of a dictator.

Ol' Virginia Advertisin'

THERE HAS COME into my hands a scarlet bound, blue tasseled brochure called "De Virginia Hambook," purporting to be the literary work of "de Ol' Virginia Hamcook." Having said so much, I am tempted to stop and let it go at that, for the brochure is an unreconstructed piece of advertising, complete with goatee, juleps, the Virginia reel and Ol' Marse Robert E. Lee. Its obvious design is to coax damnyankee bellies into reserving within themselves more ham room for a certain brand of ol' Virginia ham. However, to falter would be craven, so to the rollicking tune of "Old Joe Hooker, Git Outa the Wilderness," I'll proceed.

There is, fortunately, no Scarlett O'Hara in the Hamcook opus, though there is a Miss Nora Lee Randolph, to whom we'll come shortly. The book is superior to "Gone With the Wind," however, to the extent that there is considerably less of it.

In "de fo'word," de ol' Virginia Hamcook, after a nostalgic stanza devoted to the ham appetite of Ol' Marstah ("He sho' knowed how to eat!"), continues plaintively:

"Ah cooked it once fo' Gen'l Lee.
He say, 'Dis am a treat!
I wouldn't mind de bullets if
De angels cured such meat!'"

Here we have good ol' Marse Robert at his wisecracking best, always ready with a quip to toss to friend or foe. But, to continue, de Ol' Hamcook browns her lyric in the oven with:

When Gabriel blows his trumpet
And I knocks upon de gate,
St. Peter'll say: "You bring a ham?
"Pass in—thanks—dis am great!"

Ah well, of course Ol' Marstah and Ol' Marse Sain' Petuh done been in de col', col', ground a right long time now, and death, perhaps, broadens one. Still, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that the goatees might fly in heaven if Ol' Marstah inopportunely caught Ol' Marse Sain' Petuh calmly devouring a ham which Ol' Marstah knew must have been filched from his own pantry.

After giving recipes for keeping, cooking and carving hams, the booklet develops original plans for titillating the fancies of the socially jaded and those suffering from a surfeit of cocktail parties, swing and jive about town.

"Invite," it says, "your friends to an Old Virginia Reel!"

And then get out of town as fast as you can, would be the advice of an old realist. But Miss Nora Lee Randolph is dewey eyed and brave and she goes right through with it. The booklet says she sends out invitations decorated with "an old-fashioned girl in hoop skirts or ruffles and pantalettes in silhouette."

"Miss Nora Lee Randolph invites you to her
OLD VIRGINIA REEL
Friday evening at 9 o'clock.
In her home, 1200 W. Grace St.
Please come in the costume of an ancestor."

In case Miss Nora Lee fears that some of her invited guests may not be able to dig up an ancestor, or at least a costumed one, the booklet provides her with a thoughtful and ready made alternative: "Please wear the costume of 1860 or earlier."

For parties outside Ol' Virginia, the second alternative is infinitely more tactful. In Virginia, of course, Miss Randolph has no need to pen her invitations warily. In a pinch, all of her guests could attend the party in the costume of Li'l Missie Pocahontas, from whom Miss Randolph herself is descended, unless I miss my guess.

It is decreed that "the gentleman calling figures in the reel should be in costume with little goatee and old-fashioned heavy watch chain, etc." The "etc." probably means a julep, though this is left to conjecture. There is another puzzle in the booklet, too.

Following "de fo'word" is a page, blank except for the cryptic quotation: "Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them."

I have spent much time in trying to puzzle this out. Does it refer to hogs or hams? Does it refer to goatees, Virginia reels, Mrs. Susannah Carter's "Recipe" (circa 1802), or ancestors, all of which are mentioned in the booklet. There is no clew. Your guess is as good as mine.

The unthinking might be tempted to conjecture that here is a prescient forewarning of the celebrated Judge Roberts controversy. But it is extremely unlikely that de Ol' Virginia Hamcook's prophetic thoughts would have erred and strayed amidst constitutional technicalities. I fancy de Ol' Virginia Hamcook would have been no more au courant of politics, present, past or future, than was one of her sisters, this time, as it happened, an ol' Georgia Yamcook. De ol' Georgia Yamcook heard her folks speaking of a new dispensation in Washington.

"Lawsie me," she said, "you don' mean to tell me, dat young Massah Newcombe Deal done growed up a'ready and got hisself a job in Washington! Lawd, Lawd, wouldn' ol' Massah Newcombe a been proud if he'd a lived to see dat?"

About Mr. Ickes

THIS RUNNING DEBATE with Harold Ickes on the freedom of the press is going to be good for the American press and for the country, as well. It will emphasize the faults of the press and tricks and insincerities of statesmen and politicians, too, and the people, being apprised of wrongs on both sides, through these mutual recriminations, will bear down with the pressure of their will and compel more tidy behavior all around.

The criticism of the press should come from the press itself, but, although we are nicer now than ever before and the best press in the world, if that means anything, self-criticism, except in meditation never is completely frank. You try hitting yourself on the chin with all your might and you will find that at the instant of the impact, as they say in golf, you will pull the punch. Not even Joe Louis, great hitter that he is, can hit himself hard enough to loosen a tooth or score a knockdown. Hitting someone else is another matter and the press can rip and tear with complete abandon and, also, with complete honesty, in attacking evils outside itself. In his own thoughts a man may express very harsh opinions of himself, but something in human nature prevents his saying publicly, "I am a louse." And I doubt that the house dick of the New Deal, in his private thoughts, approves himself as heartily as he does in public. If he does, he is an egomaniac.

Resorts To Practices That He Condemns

HAROLD CAN'T see it that way, but he is in the same position as the press. It just isn't possible for him to belt the New Deal for its faults, or himself for his, as hard as he belts the press, even though they be apparent to him in his private reflections. Moreover, in criticizing the press, he resorts to the same practices that he condemns in the press. For example, he has pleaded guilty to two "over-statements" in his debate with Frank Gannett, but did not bear down on the fact that he, like the press, has a duty to check his information, particularly when it is delivered in malice, as these two "over-statements" were. And, although he accuses the press of undue zest in refuting his "over-statements" his position as a party to the row disqualifies him as a judge of the permissible degree of zest.

He also quotes, as gospel, the opinion of Time magazine that a cigarette story which was widely used but also widely disused, was likely "to scare the life out of tobacco manufacturers and make tobacco users' flesh creep." Is there some special quality in Time magazine which makes its off-hand opinions unassailable or does Ickes credit this opinion merely because it serves his purpose in debate? After all, Time, too, is of the press which he assails generally and its back cover this week is devoted to an ad for Camels and he was just saying that the advertiser's money gives him an editorial power in the press. As for the accuracy of Time's opinion in this case, I am smoking a cigarette at this moment although I have read now and then, for years, medical articles about the effect of tobacco on the heart, throat and lungs and was hammered with lectures by itinerant reformers on the pernicious coffin-nail when I was young.

He doesn't prove that this story would make tobacco users' flesh creep or deter them from smoking, and I submit that this press opinions on which he places so much reliance falls in the category which he condemns as the work of "loose-writing individuals." Yet, he likes it fine.

Ickes Sounds Off In Big Blurts

THE FACT THAT the cigarette story, although widely used, also was widely disused, he interprets as censorship by the advertiser against the public health. But it was fearsomely described in a magazine which carries cigarette copy and other editors which put put it in the spike have thought nothing more sinister than "what the hell, everybody knows cigarettes aren't good for you." It certainly wasn't good news. One editor edits Time magazine. Another edits a daily in South Bend or Rutland. Their problems of space and their editorial judgment vary.

Ickes has sounded off in two big blurts. This week, one in Collier's, the other on the air before a radical organization of lawyers. It is impossible to answer both in one piece, and I expect to talk back further from day to day on the points he raises.

But, in closing today, how do you like this declaration from Ickes' story in Collier's: "Congress ought to make it possible for the President to veto any extraneous provision that is not germane to a bill." That proposal to let the President rewrite laws after they have passed Congress, changing them to suit himself, comes right in the middle of a hot denial that the reorganization bill was intended to give him dictatorial power.

Can you picture what Mr. Roosevelt would do with the right to "veto any extraneous provision that is not germane" in his own opinion, "to a bill" after it has left Congress?

The Eurasiatic Axis

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

The Have-Nots Harass The Haves

Shanghai.

THROUGH THE ADROIT use of intimidation and the mailed fist, the Reich-Italian-Japanese "axis" has become one of the major factors in the complex interplay of forces in the Pacific area. Threatening war to nations either unwilling or not yet prepared to fight, the members of the "aggressor bloc" have made deep inroads into the interests of their rivals.

Germany last month concluded a "cultural pact" with Japan, providing for the planting of Nazi ideas on the receptive Nipponese soil. Italy has with Tokyo a treaty of commerce and amity, which provides for the barter of Nippon-made goods for Italian munitions.

Both the European nations have, moreover, extended diplomatic recognition to the independent empire of Manchukuo, Nippon's faithful friend and ally, whom they drain dry of agricultural products in exchange for machinery sent to Japan proper.

Whether there is a military pact uniting the three aggressor nations is not certain. Information secured by me from thoroughly reliable Japanese sources indicates that military and political co-operation between Italy and Japan was discussed early this year by two Italian missions which made extended stays in Tokyo. It was also said that, as a part of the agreement reached, 75 Savoia Marchetti bombers were to have been bartered to Japan for Manchurian soya beans.

Ten-Year Triple Alliance Pending?

REPORTS of a loose military understanding among the three nations were revived during the Czecho-Slovakian crisis, when government spokesmen in Tokyo unburdened themselves of very unequivocal pledges to help Rome and Berlin to protect civilization and combat communism.

No one will ever know the exact nature of the important messages —including one from Marshal Goering—brought to Tokyo early in December aboard the Condor plane, which later sank ingloriously in shallow water off Manila. The sensational flight, however, coincided with reports in the London News-Chronicle that a triple alliance is only awaiting signature.

The main provisions of the pact were described as follows:

1. If one of the three nations is menaced by war by a third power, its allies are to provide political, diplomatic and economic assistance.

2. If one of the three nations is attacked, all are to consult immediately on the measures of assistance to be granted by the other two allies.

3. If all three powers are at war, they pledge to sign no separate peace or armistice but to act collectively.

4. The duration of the alliance is set at ten years, with additional five years if the agreement is not denounced before the expiration of the decade.

While Herr von Ribbentrop was reported to be ready to sign the accord immediately, Count Ciano was said to be anxious to postpone the signature until the successful conclusion of the current Anglo-Italian negotiations on the problems of the Mediterranean and Spain.

Informed quarters here regarded such an alliance as likely, pointing out that every one of the three aggressor nations would have nothing to lose and everything to gain from the accord.

To Italy and Japan, the alliance would give assurance of utter impunity in the gentle task of twisting the British lion's tail, and, incidentally, of exerting great pressure on France, which is already seriously alarmed by the close proximity of the Japanese forces to her Indo-China.

Yet Germans Aided Chinese Resistance

BUT IN ALLYING themselves with Japan the two Fascist powers will be guilty of a shameful betrayal of China, with which they were only a year ago on intimate terms.

When the war broke out 17 months ago Germany was China's most trusted friend. The Reich stood third in China's trade list. German military advisers ruled supreme in the counsels of war, while German doctors and engineers actively assisted Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's work of national reconstruction.

In the first six months, the German military advisers, headed by Gen. Alexander von Falkenhausen, a brilliant strategist and administrator, played an important role in organizing and directing Chinese resistance. Chinese tactics in the sanguinary battle of Shanghai, in which the Japanese casualties exceeded 50,000 men, followed the orthodox German pattern. In the ruins of Chapei this writer saw unscathed Chinese pill boxes duplicating German war-time fortifications in France.

The famous battle of Taierchwang, it is said, was fought according to strategy developed by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's German military "brain trust." In this engagement, which lasted more than a week, two Japanese divisions were almost entirely wiped out.

German reluctance to part ways with the Chinese government was probably not to a small measure caused by the flourishing German trade with China. In 1936, next to the United States, the Reich was the largest supplier of goods to the Chinese, standing ahead of Japan proper.

In pecentages, German import and exports to China stood in 1936 at 16.67 and 6.16 per cent, respectively. The total value of the Sino-German trade in that year was slightly in excess of U. S. $50,000,000.

German Policy Is Reversed

THE volte face in German policy came in February. All the German advisers were ordered, reportedly on pain of political excommunication, to return home. Dr. Oscar Trautmann, a friend of China, was recalled to Berlin and no successor has yet been selected. The flow of German munitions to China was greatly decreased. And to cap it off, Herr Hitler on February 20 announced his intention to recognize Japan's puppet empire on the mainland.

The relations between the two countries have been greatly exacerbated in the succeeding months, the friction culminating in the failure of Herr Hitler to receive the newly appointed Chinese Ambassador on the scheduled day. The presentation of credentials was postponed from week to week, assertedly because Herr Hitler could not allow references to his ally's aggression in China to be included in the document.

Why Rome Desires Japanese Victory

IF GERMANY is widening the gap between herself and China with discretion, no such restraint is exhibited by Rome. Italy's trade with this country has never been large. Occupied with Mediterranean problems, Mussolini has largely ignored the international scramble for the rich Chinese market.

Early realizing the importance of Japan's aggression as a factor distracting Britain's attention, Mussolini openly began to flirt with Tokyo. Political and economic missions were sent to Japan to exude good will and to negotiate a trade agreement.

Tokyo and Rome mutually recognized the seizure of Ethiopia and Manchuria as great crusades to uphold civilization. Mussolini delivered several weighty orations on Japan's mission to save the world from communism. The Italian Ambassador was recalled from China. His successor has not yet presented his credentials to the Chinese national government, although he has already met the leaders of Japanese-sponsored administrations.

The Italian line of reasoning is very clear. Mussolini is banking on Japan's victory, which, he knows, will jeopardize Britain's interests in the Pacific and compel London to be more tractable in Europe. While there is probably little thought of trade in Mussolini's mind, he will undoubtedly take full advantage of the preferred position in the China market offered to Rome and Berlin by the wily Japanese.

Intrinsically, the Japan-Germany-Italy axis is un-Oriental. It is rather a bridge linking Europe with Asia. Each of its three so-called "have-not" members is using the accord to further its own aggressive ends by blackmailing its own particular foe among the "haves."

The axis is pointed at Russia and Britain, but it is China, however, on whose tortured body the three apostles of aggression are demonstrating their capacity for mischief.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Frontiers Of The United States

IT WILL NOT be easy to regard the occupation of the island of Hainan by the Japanese navy as no more than incident of the war in China. With this strategic outpost to the west and the naval bases in the mandated islands to the east, the Philippines are surrounded. But what is even more important, at Hainan Japan obtains an advanced base within 1,500 miles of Singapore.

The timing of this new aggression cannot be ignored; the Japanese have acted at the moment when the Spanish civil war is ending and the diplomatic struggle for the naval control of the Mediterranean and the eastern Atlantic is approaching a crisis. It has been the Japanese method to begin each new phase of conquest by testing out the resistance that might be offered. Thus before the Japanese decided to invade China proper in the summer of 1937, they tested out the Russians by sinking a Russian gunboat on the Amar River. When the Russians showed they were incapable of doing anything, the Japanese began their invasion of Northern China. A year later, that is last summer, when the Czech crisis was developing in Europe, the Japanese made a second test of the Russian power. There was a Russo-Japanese battle on the Manchurian border. The test convinced them that they need not fear the Russians, and so, while Britain and France were preoccupied in Europe, the Japanese invaded Southern China, took Canton, and struck down the British power at Hongkong.

Appear To Be Testing Resistance

Once again they are, it would seem, testing out the resistance before making another great advance. This time they have seized a strategic island which lies within the French sphere of influence and is of extraordinary importance to the whole British position in the East Indies and even in Australia. They have chosen a moment when the naval power of Great Britain and France is anxiously preoccupied in European waters.

Their action places the British and French in an ugly dilemma. If the British send enough ships to the Far East to check the Japanese advance, they will become too weak in Europe to check the Italian advance which would then, because the risks were reduced, almost certainly obtain much more active backing from Germany. And if they do not send ships to the Far East, the Japanese are in a position to establish a naval control of the Western Pacific, and to command the immense resources of the Dutch East Indies, the Philippines and Australia. Once established in this vital center of world power, the Japanese Empire cannot be dislodged without a great and exhausting war.

Situation Termed Of Serious Nature

Whichever way one looks at it, the situation is too serious to be regarded with indifference by the United States. The seizure of Hainan at the moment when Britain and France are so vitally concerned about Majorca and Morocco and the independence of Spain does not have the air of a coincidence. It looks very much like concerted action.

For that reason it makes the situation in Europe much more critical. If the Japanese war party demonstrates at Hainan that the road to Singapore is open, the hesitation of the Japanese moderates will almost certainly be overcome. The chances of a major military-diplomatic offensive on three fronts—in northern Europe, in the Mediterranean and in the Far East—will be measurably increased.

U. S. Government Can't Be Indifferent

If that offensive is successful, the European fascist powers will have broken through into the Atlantic, establishing themselves in Spain and in Africa, and the Japanese will be masters of Singapore, which is one of the two controlling points, the other being Panama, in the Pacific. The United States which has only one Navy, though it has to defend itself in two oceans, will then find that it is isolated in a way which no isolationist will like.

The United States cannot be indifferent to a situation which threatens, perhaps within the next few months, to establish in both oceans at once, and at the strategic points which control the two oceans, an alliance of highly armed powers bent on the conquest of empire. This is no question of our intervening in the affairs of Europe and Asia. This is a question of preserving our security in the two oceans amidst which the American continents are placed.

Question Of Using Diplomatic Power

Nor is it a question of our going to war in Europe or Asia. It is a question of using our diplomatic power effectively and promptly to prevent the development of a situation which will lead either to a world war, not a European war but a world war, or to a greater Munich, in which the strategic control of the Pacific and the Atlantic is transferred from friendly and unaggressive nations to aggressive and not very friendly ones.

Resolute diplomatic action, if well conceived and supported by Congress and American public opinion, can at this juncture avert both the danger of a world war and the danger of a complete overturn of our naval position in the two oceans.

The main lines of that diplomatic action are clearly indicated by the situation. We should inform the Japanese that the establishment of naval positions anywhere in the Pacific, at Hainan or in the mandated islands, is contrary to the meaning of the third treaty signed at Washington in 1922; and we should invoke the consultative clauses of that treaty which obligate Japan to explain to us, to the British, and to the French, what these encroachments by their navy signify. To strengthen our diplomacy in this action, Congress should authorize at once the fortification of Guam. Japan's response to the invitation to consult and negotiate should then determine whether or not we actually proceed to fortify Guam.

Should Clarify European Position

At the same time we should clarify our position in Europe by making it plain that, having scrupulously refused to help either side in the Spanish civil war, we regard it as an American interest that Spain should be an independent and neutral power. This is what Gen. Franco declares to be his interest, and there is no reason to doubt the sincerity of his professions. He can unite his country, and reconstruct it, only if Spain is able to disentangle itself from European power politics and to enjoy a long period of peace.

Though Gen. Franco needed Italian help to win the civil war, he now needs British and French help to win and to preserve Spanish independence. He will get that help. It is an American interest, as a matter of basic naval security, that he should get that help. For with Spain independent, the dangers of a European war would at once be greatly reduced, and the security of the Atlantic Ocean greatly improved. The most effective way to contribute to this result would be to open our markets in war as well as in peace to the governments, which now include Gen. Franco's, that have a vital interest in maintaining the existing naval position in the Atlantic.

Frontier Of U. S. Is Both Oceans

The alternative to such a twofold diplomatic action in the two oceans is not to do nothing and to pretend to believe that our frontier is at the 12-mile limit. Our frontier is not on the Rhine. Our frontier is not at Hankow. But our frontier is in both the great oceans, and if we do not maintain that frontier by diplomacy today, tomorrow we shall have to defend it by building another Navy.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

For Valentine Day

From a Tory to F. D. R.

If you loved me
As I love you,
Our love would be

From F. D. R. to a Businessman

Today there's something Business misses;
I'm sure it isn't
Love and kisses.

To Mayor LaGuardia

The rose is red, the violet blue,
A corner stone's of grayish hue;
Steam shovels send their love to you,
And so do mortar mixers, too.

For Adolph Hitler

A valentine you wouldn't like,
For you're too busy at the mike;
I do not think you will get many—
In fact, I doubt that you'll get any.

Harry Hopkins to Industry

My heart is full of tender love—
From housetops I now shout it;
When you are loved as I love you
How can you say "I doubt it?"

Max Schmeling to Joe Louis

My nose is red, my body's blue
From that last fight I had with you;
Again I yearn to hear the gong . . .
It wouldn't be so very long.

Mussolini to Chamberlain

Oh, won't you come and be my love?
Quite happy we could be—
If I kept constant watch of you
And you kept watch of me.

Chamberlain to the World

A valentine of hope I send;
Your hearts I try to cheer.
My message: Put your trust in peace . . .
But keep your gas masks near.

Mr. Morgenthau to the Taxpayers

This day I talk to you of love,
Which must seem somewhat funny;
But all the other days this year
I'll only talk of money.

Japan to China

When shrapnel tears your homes apart
And bombs drop from above,
What makes you think we have no heart?—
It's our idea of love.

It would have been a boom winter in business if our factories had shifted to the production of skis, skates, bobsleds, snow shovels and aspirin tablets.

Elmer Twitchell was going to play Tobacco in a Florida race the other day, but decided it was just a plug.

Technique Of Radicals

By Mark Sullivan

A Significant 'And'

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, in a radio broadcast Sunday night, used a combination of words which may be a landmark in recent American history. I will repeat the whole of Mr. Hull's sentence—see if you can recognize what is novel in it:

"Human rights and property rights lie at the very foundation of international relationships."

The new thing there is the word "and." That word "and," appearing between the terms "human rights" and "property rights" is a departure from recent practice in many quarters. I don't mean it is a departure on Mr. Hull's part—he would have spoken this way any time he had occasion to mention this subject.

But in some other quarters the common word appearing between those two terms is "versus." The usual phrase is "human rights versus property rights."

It is a technique of radicals to create the notion that there is conflict between human rights and property rights, that they are mutually exclusive alternatives, and that we must make choice between them. This technique of radicals has been so successful that it has affected many of the thoughtless. To speak of "human rights versus property rights" has become almost as common as to speak of "good versus bad." The phrase has come to permeate much American talk. I refrain from saying it permeates American thinking, because anyone capable of thinking, and taking the time to think, would not say it.

Seven Bloody Centuries To The Bill Of Rights

PROBABLY the current phrase is not quite as Mr. Hull put it. The accurate phrase would be "human rights including property rights." For the right to own property stands on a par with the other human rights and is unseverable from them. The right to work, to save; to use savings to buy a house, a bond, a life-insurance policy or any other form of property, and be safeguarded in the possession of that property, is on all fours with the other human rights.

The Government should arbitrarily and without compensation take away a citizen's right to his property is as unthinkable as to take away his right to free choice of worship, or his right to trial by jury, or his right not to have his person seized by government except after inquiry by an independent court, the right of "habeas corpus." These rights are an inseparable unit. As a unit they are the guaranties of individual freedom.

What I have said here is the summary of what was won for man by hard and bloody struggle, and has been built up and maintained over seven centuries. The essence of it is expressed in the Bill of Rights in the American Constitution.

Mr. Hull used his phrase in connection with international relationships. His full statement, including a direct declaration of strong purpose, is:

"Human rights and property rights lie at the very foundation of international relationships. These rights must be defined and they must be maintained."

Fits A Condition That Faced Mexico

IT IS NOT possible to say Mr. Hull was thinking of Mexico, for neither that country nor any other was named in his address. But what Mr. Hull said fits a condition that arose in Mexico and recently has come to have international weight in a way that is novel, and of the highest importance.

About a year ago the Mexican government seized, without compensation, oil wells belonging to American corporations. At the same time and previously they seized many farms and land holdings, large and small, belonging to Americans. It is the seizure of the oil wells that has come to have far-reaching international importance. The seizure, without compensation, was in direct defiance of international law.

So long as it seemed merely a case of Mexico seizing property belonging to American oil companies it stimulated no great concern on the part of the American Government. Almost we seemed to condone it. No note of protest by the American Government has ever been delivered to the Mexican government. (There have been notes and negotiations about the farms and land holdings.)

Recently, however, Mexico has done a disturbing thing, something which raises this incident far above an ordinary seizure of American property. Mexico has taken the oil from the seized wells and bartered it to Nazi Germany, on the basis of an extremely low valuation. In return Germany delivers to Mexico, or to quarters designated by Mexico, German manufactured goods, likewise at a very low valuation. As a result of this barter—with valuations lower than ordinary cost—German steel, typewriters, chemicals and other manufactured goods have displaced similar goods made in the ordinary course by American and other manufacturers. The displacement has occurred not only in Mexico but within the United States, and it is believed the displacement is taking place in South America.

A Discovery About The Right Of Property

THE DETRIMENTAL consequences of this in an ordinary commercial sense can be dismissed for the moment. The more serious effect is the strengthening of Naziism as a form of society and government, and the extending of Nazi influence and advantage in Mexico and South America.

President Roosevelt regards Naziism, authoritarian government, as an enemy, which must be resisted by democracies, including our own. He says we must arm ourselves against the threat of Naziism, not merely the direct threat to the United States but the indirect threat involved in Nazi infiltration in Latin America. And now he finds that this enemy is strengthened by the seizure of American oil wells in Mexico.

In short, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull discover that the right of private property is fundamental, not only internally but externally, internationally. They are discovering that the right of private property is not only one of the keystones of individual freedom; it is part of the very basis of the civilization that is represented by the democracies of the world.

If History Repeats

By Barnet Nover

Disraeli And Chamberlain

IN A RECENT speech, Neville Chamberlain compared himself, at least by implication, with the younger Pitt. But the present drift of his foreign policy suggests a more immediate parallel between what Chamberlain is seeking to accomplish and what another of his predecessors, Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, actually did accomplish 60 years ago.

Historic parallels are always faulty and usually misleading. By birth, training, temperament and ability, Chamberlain is as far removed from Disraeli as is the reign of George VI from that of Queen Victoria. And only by a great stretch of the imagination can the Eastern Crisis of 1875-78 be said to resemble the Europen crisis of today, although then, as now, the continent teetered on the edge of war.

WHERE THE PARALLEL arises is in the circumstances that, in 1878, after Great Britain's rival, Russia, had carried an interventionist war through to a successful conclusion, Disraeli stepped in to deprive that rival of the fruits of victory. Now Mr. Chamberlain appears anxious to perform a similar act of mayhem on Italy's plans of cashing in on her Spanish triumph, if and when that triumph becomes conclusive.

During the first two and a half years of the Eastern Crisis, Great Britain was torn by a violent conflict of public opinion. The outbreak of rebellion in Bosnia against the Turks won the sympathy of Liberals. Gladstone, Disraeli's great rival, thundered against the iniquities of the Turks and demanded that the minions of the Sultan be turned bag and baggage out of Europe. But Disraeli, with a highly developed sense of empire, was fearful that any development that would weaken Turkey would provide an opportunity for Russian aggrandizement. And with the Suez Canal open for traffic, Disraeli was particularly anxious that the Russian bear should not wash his paws in the blue waters of the eastern Mediterranean.

THE REBELLION in the Balkans spread, in part as the result of wholly legitimate grievances by the Christian population living under Turkish rule; in part, too, as a result of Russian intrigue. What began as a civil war between ruler and ruled soon developed into an international conflict with Russia coming to the assistance of their fellow Slavs.

The Turks fought bravely, as they have always done. But superior organization and equipment told in the end and after the fall of Plevna the road to Constantinople lay open.

It was then, and only then, that Disraeli decided the time for action had arrived. Over the protests of his foreign secretary, Lord Derby, he moved the fleet to Malta and the music halls of London rang with the chorus:

We've got the ships!
We've got the men!
We've got the money, too!
The Russians shall not have Constantinople!

IN DUE COURSE Turkey had to sue for peace. She had to cede a valuable slice of territory in the Caucasus to Russia, and make considerable concessions to Russia's Balkan allies. Bulgaria was to be erected into an autonomous principality, subject to Russian advice. Had this treaty stood, Russia would have become dominant in the Balkans.

If, because of British warnings, Russia did not get Constantinople, she was placed in a position, through her Bulgarian protege, to push further toward that age-old goal whenever the occasion again became propitious. But Great Britain balked at the extension of Russian influence in the Balkans and so did Austria-Hungary. Finally, when the Anglo-Russian and the Austro-Russian crises became acute and the peace of Europe was threatened, Bismarck stepped in and offered to act as "honest broker." A conference of powers was held in Berlin and, while Russia was not forced to disgorge much territory herself, her hope to dominate the Balkans was destroyed. And Great Britain herself, without having sacrificed a single man or fired a single shot, received Cyprus from the Turks.

THE SPANISH crisis today differs in many highly important particulars from the Balkan crisis of the seventies. But now, as then, one of the underlying factors involved in the crisis is the control of Mediterranean communications. Who holds Constantinople holds one of the eastern keys to the route to India; who holds Gibraltar, the Riff, Majorca, is in a position to control the western gateway of the inland sea.

Mr. Chamberlain has never shown that he was particularly concerned by the Spanish civil war as such. If acts are any indication, his own personal sympathies were with the Franco group; but the official British policy was, from the beginning, one of aloof indifference. But he cannot help but be concerned over the possibility that the fascist powers may seek to capitalize the Franco victory by establishing a foothold on Spanish soil.

He appears quite willing, in fact eager, to come to terms with Franco. But he wants the Italians and Germans to clear out, now that they have made victory for Franco possible.

Disraeli had his way. At Berlin in 1878, Russia was deprived of the major fruits of her victory. But Russia, in 1878, was isolated. Even Bismarck had deserted her. Italy has Germany. And having squandered her substance in helping achieve a victory for Franco, it is difficult to believe she will leave Spain simply because Great Britain and France want her to. Can she be made to? Perhaps. Perhaps Chamberlain can repeat in Spain the role played by Disraeli in the Balkans 60 years ago. History may repeat itself. But don't bet on it.

Glimpses of Justice Brandeis in His Long Years on Supreme Court

Justice Brandeis and Court Call on Two Presidents

Justice Brandeis Marks 75th Anniversary

Spring Hats Are Novel In Trend

Even Conservatives Must Get Used To Fussy Chapeaux With Tailored Suits

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

This is the seventh in a series of articles on American Design.

NEW SPRING millinery is going to turn a lot of heads this year. Its going to require a formal introduction as well, for the spanking new crop of chapeaux makes this winter's models definitely "old hat."

Nimble fingers have for weeks been braiding fanciful straws into miniature-proportioned hat bodies. Sketch pads have been worked overtime to center upon a theme for the spring millinery season, already upon us in the middle of February. Harryson, an astute New York designer, recently has collected a group of the most distinguished hats from the great French couturiers and transposed them into all-American styles for the all-American beauty. Here are some of Harryson's observations aimed at the woman who believes it is worthwhile adapting her mind and personality to the change in fashion tempo.

This spring's best dresser must realize that hats will be worn well forward on the cranium to expose half the head to the elements. There is height now where pie-plate silhouettes existed before.

The woman of chic must inure herself to wearing fussy hats, even with tailored suits, and to learn to combine colors in riotous effects. As the year progresses, millinery will be dramatic, feminine and flattering, glamorous and eye-compelling. Here is a summation of the outstanding types of hats to watch, as predicted for a long and decorative life by Harryson.

SILHOUETTE—High crowned, small brimmed sailors, including pilgrim and postillion types.

Bretons, cloches and turbans worn on the back of the head like a child's.

Tunisian and Algerian turbans strong—due to Deladier's visit to those countries.

Smaller silhouettes have cuffed effects with stepped-up crowns, some narrow and forward, others rounded but with sensible backs for comfort.

MATERIALS—Coarse, rough straw braids, with shiny surfaces; Caredo, a wide, thick-brimmed straw braid body; Caron, a dull-finished braid; Picaret, a woven straw fabric, good for sports hats; Reston de Paille, a shiny scalloped-edged novelty; Derami, a novelty-edged braid; Zanzibar, a multi-colored, interwoven braid.

Colors in these braids include: Bagatelle-blue, Parme-violet, Rio-violet, raspberry, burnt, gold, cognac-brown and, of course, black and navy.

UNUSUAL HIGH-COLOR COMBINATIONS — Cyclamen pink with violet; green with gold.

TRIMMINGS — Multitudes of flowers, roses and spikes used to achieve height; novelty ribbons, such as picot, satin, plaids, stripes; pique, veiling over everything.

Dusty Blue and Violet for Spring

Like a new spring cabbage perched on a giant mushroom, the hat above takes its cue from the garden. The silhouette of this fetching advance straw hat is the mushroom-sailor. The trimming is a dusty miniature-tinted blue taffata ribbon, forming a chou, which, of course, means cabbage in French. Harryson, who designed this hat, is enthusiastic about the combination of blue with deep Rio Violet. The type of glistening rugged straw braid is called Paloma and its natural scalloped edges form a petticoat flounce around the brim, a hat that may be worn for street of cocktails.

Comic Valentines

To a Feminine Radio Voice

Why do you make me tear my hair
Whenever you get on the air?
Your tones they drip so much of honey,
I wonder why they pay you money.
You talk with voice so girlie-girlie
That I itch to treat your burly-burly.

To a Woman of Importance

Simply because you have a chauffeur,
Is no reason everyone should defer
To your presence in places where people line up,
With your poor sportmanship, I am plenty fed up.

To a Congressman

If you must constantly rave of life in its 1780 phases,
For heaven's sake, please try to get a few new nifty phrases.

To a Woman Who Has Jelled

I do not like the way you address me,
In those tones that are too, too sweet,
Yet also very, very firm and irrevocable.
As if like a kindergarten teacher,
You were admonishing
A child who had been naughty;
Please limber up and be a little more uncertain of yourself.
There is always a possibility, you see, that your victim may also have a mentality above 14.

To a Washington Bachelor

When acting cagey, please remember
You're getting on toward your September,
Besides, it's not that you're so hot,
That women chase you 'round a lot,
It's just that other men are missing,

To Member of an Old Family

Here's just a tip I pass along,
If you would cease to be a bore,
forget the past and all its lore,
And change the note of your theme song,
Do not of Grandpa so much prate,
For people feeling as they do,
May wonder as they gaze at you,
Why did the stock deteriorate?

To a Sophisticate

Because you are so very bored with it all,
Is no sign you have anything on the ball,
Being able to say "no" and "yes" without any gracious appendages,
Is certainly no sign of intellectual or social heritages,
And being so preoccupied with your own self,
May land you eventually on some obscure shelf.

To an Office Martyr

Now I for one am very tired,
Of hearing of all you have to do,
And how the other people shirk,
And load their duties off on you,
How other departments have such a cinch,
And nobody else works quite so hard,
Oh please grow up and be your age,
And stop this babyish canard.

To a Clubwoman

If you cannot ever understand
What's going on in meeting,
Please bring a private interpreter,
And don't ask for a repeating.

A Woman's New York

Franchot Tone, Now On Loose, Rates Much Attention

NOW THAT Franchot Tone is Broadway's Number One matinee idol and dream man, and is also on the loose matrimonially for the first time in several years, the youth from Niagara Falls is evidently determined to have all the fun there is when his labors in his play, "The Gentle People," are over for the evening. Franchot goes a lot of places, and at a very high rate of speed.

ALICE HUGHES

In a vain attempt to stall off autograph hounds, the beautiful Mr. Tone is called "Max" by his pals on these early morning expeditions. It works once out of 125 times. Mr. Tone gads about so rapidly that very few New Yorkers are able to keep up with him at all after 11:30 p. m. The most we usually get is a quick flash. Once the curtain has fallen at the Belasco Theater Max heads straight for the Stork Club; starts from there. On a recent night at the Stork I found him in edifying converse with Miss Dana Dale, who is to have the lead in a new show called "The Family." Max has been giving Miss Dale, who began life as Miss Debuskey in Pottsville, Pa., French lessons. All

Max flits from bistro to joint, spreading sunshine as he goes. Nor is the former Mr. Joan Crawford oblivious to feminine charms. Thanks to his personal pulchritude, he seems to do quite well in this department. His pet name for the most recent fancy, discovered in his early morning wanderings, is "That little bit of heaven," which is certainly a sweet and delicate way of referring to the young ladies who arouse his mental interest.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Cafe society, bless its childish heart, has been somewhat aroused by the presence of Lady Dufferin and Ava, who seems to insist on wearing a yellow fur coat—even during luncheon. Thus the ladies who strut about the stylish restaurant in costly mink look opulent almost to the point of showiness. But they, on the other hand, are not "ladies." I suppose that the mere fact of being a peeress allows one to wear just any colored coat at all—a privilege forbidden to those of us who are just girls trying to get along.

Boil together, without stirring, 1 cup of granulated sugar, ½ cup of boiling water and 1 teaspoon of vinegar. When a fine thread forms (when a portion of hot sirup is poured from a spoon), pour slowly into the beaten white of 1 egg. Beat until thick and creamy. Add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and ¼ teaspoon of almond extract and a little pink coloring. Frost top and sides.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Office Firebrand Explodes Like Donald Duck in His More Apoplectic Moments; How Handle Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I work in an office with two other girls, one of whom has lately exhibited so marked a talent for tantrums that I am positive she is the human counterpart of Donald Duck in his more apoplectic moments. After a run-in with the other girl, she retreated into a deep silence for two days during the past week, whenever the girl approached her. Then she apologized, saying she realized she had acted peculiarly, but that she was "sensitive" and that the girl had wounded her feelings.

A day later, on no provocation, she aimed her peppery temper at me. To give her opportunity to regain her poise, I walked out of the office. When I returned to get something from the files, she followed me and, in addition to making grossly inaccurate and insulting observations about my morals, couched these remarks in language so "ordinary" that I was compelled to leave the room again and go to my own desk. I made no reply, since I consider office squabbles (especially the female variety) altogether undignified. Personal remarks such as she made have no place in a business office. Even had her remarks been founded on fact (which they were not) I still could not condone them.

Four days have passed and we have nothing to say to each other. I am not upset about the girl, but about the difficult working conditions which her attitude has caused. Although our work does not overlap, a certain amount of communication is necessary between us, as between all co-workers. Although I am content with my job, the present situation has caused me to contemplate resigning. However, I need the job.

Our employer has been away for a week, but is due back in several days. Should I go to him with this tale? My reluctance to do so is occasioned by the high voltage current of "sweetness and light" which this girl turns on all office visitors and upon our employer. I am inclined to think he would consider my story incredible, although two other persons have witnessed her recent outbursts.

I have no desire to "tattle" or to cause trouble for anyone. But if this girl is nervous and ill, I think her employer should know about it, so that she may be given a holiday. If nothing gnaws at her nerves, then she just has a terrible temper. In this case, she needs a collection of pointers on the necessity for tolerance. Do you think our employer is the person to give these pointers? I have worked for five years and have never, until now, experienced a thing of this kind. Since all Washington looks upon you as a happy combination of elm tree prophet and information bureau, I, who have long read you with fidelity, now join the throngs of those who find it necessary to write you. Sincerely, M. W.

Give Her Rope

DEAR M. W.: To report this incident to your employer or to seize on the idea of resigning your job is to confess a lamentable lack of personal resourcefulness in dealing with vexatious individuals or situations—such as are latent in every environment. The other woman is behaving abominably, yet the very childishness of her behavior suggests the manner of handling her. Treat her as you would a bad-mannered child, for whose odious conduct and social discipline you personally were not responsible.

So far as her bewildering attack is concerned, the proper attitude to take is one of mildly (and silently) amazed — and perhaps slightly amused or compassionate —indifference. This you seem to have done. Keep it up. And so far as the necessity of having some oral communication with her in regard to office business is concerned — meet that necessity easily and casually as it arises, with bland disregard for her malignant stand-offishness, and with seeming forgetfulness of the episode which inspired it. This you can do with no loss of self-respect, since it is the course which serene self-esteem and a high degree of civilized intelligence would naturally dictate.

If she cannot stand up to such suave treatment—and she probably can't—she will simply be cutting her own throat in the long run. Well regulated business offices waste little sympathy and less time on non-cooperative employes of war-making temperament. Eventually they are out, and those who fought with them on their own terms usually come under disquieting suspicion. Hence the clever confrere of such a person will be punctilious in observing whatever amenities are necessary for expediting official transactions with him. This is adult, as well as impeccably efficient and diplomatically self-protective, behavior. Moreover (if this is any satisfaction), it is the attitude best calculated to put the aggressive antagonist to rout. It amounts to Fabian tactics in a nutshell, wearing the enemy down by holding war in abeyance.

If the woman's tantrums are of recent inspiration and inexplicable origin, it may be that she is ill or fretted to the point of distraction by domestic worries—yet until she invites your assistance, it is not your responsibility to attempt to stand between her and the possibly penalizing consequences of her uncontrolled hysteria. You don't wish to be a crybaby or tattletale, and neither do you want to be a busybody—and men executives are acutely distrustful of women who figure in office altercations and particularly do they fight shy of every member of the cast of an all-feminine brawl.

Because men are inclined secretly to suspect all women of possessing feline potentialities, and of being unfathomably unethical in their dealings with each other, the average man's reaction to an earnest account of such an incident as this is apt to take the form of cynical contempt for whomever is involved. Plaintiff and accused alike may expect scant courtesy from him, supposing he is appealed to as ajudicator.

Without bothering to investigate—either because he figures it is much ado about nothing, or that no mere man could ever get the truth out of a bunch of women—he is likely to strike a clear-cut attitude of washing his hands of the whole matter; of having more important things with which to occupy his time and mind; of being a noble example of a person who consistently lives above so petty a level of conflict. Yet women executives seldom show to any better advantage if appealed to in a like dilemma. Either they haven't the courage and objective regard for justice which would inspire them to investigate the situation and pronounce judgment against the offender, or (I have sometimes thought) they instinctively relish the spectacle of women at each other's throats. M. H.

Home Study Helps Culture

THAT half-apolgetic note in Fred's voice, "Betty's a dear—but her interests are pretty limited!"

What a shock to realize people are making excuses for us—"she left school early," "she's been too busy to acquire a cultural background."

Yet it's easy to make friends really proud of you, to become an alert well-informed person—able to hold your own with educated people socially and in business.

But where to begin—what to learn? Follow a simple plan of study—start with the subjects that pop up in your everyday life.

You're charmed by a broadcast from faraway Brazil? Eagerly you dip into a travel book that paints for you this vast tropical land watered by the mighty Amazon.

On the bus you hear two men talking about the C. I. O., the A. F. L. Curious to know what it's all about, you read labor articles in newspapers, magazines. And headlines—on armaments, flood control, fascism—urge you to get library books on those subjects.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Supose You Haven't Gone to College," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name and address, and the name of booklet.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The slim are the creatures who dazzle—
The thin ones are always worn to a frazzle!

BLAME THE jingle on the influence of St. Valentine! But don't you agree that it points up the difference between slimness and thinness? One connotes a zest for living, exuberant vitality, a well-toned musculature, a perfect figure—and infinite dash. The other means that you are tired all the time, have jumpy nerves and no appetite—and that the mere mention of the word "reducing" is enough to curdle your disposition.

Well, there's no reason why you should contend with such a state of mind and body. In fact, you will feel better and look much better and get more fun out of life if you turn into a slim girl.

If I know you at all, you stay in bed until the very last minute in the morning, swallow your coffee, and off you rush. That's no way to add curves. You should never rush, for rushing leads to nerve tension. When you start off hurrying, you spend nervous energy before you even begin your day's work.

Just Take It Easy

You are due for a change . . . ; get up half an hour earlier and start your day in a leisurely manner. Take 20 minutes for breakfast—oh, yes you can! Probably you aren't hungry in the morning and don't like breakfast, but you will learn to like it. If you are to gain weight you must take about one-third your food requirements for the day at this morning meal.

Have fruit juice, a slice or two of hot buttered toast, and a little honey. Later, after you begin to enjoy eating breakfast, you can add a poached egg to this menu or have a larger serving of cereal. Then tuck in extra calories by having a glass of whole milk in the midmorning. Later on, add one-third of a glass of cream to the milk.

And don't dash out and buy a hat at noon! Find a quiet place where you can relax and instead of a sandwich and tea, order a creamed soup with nice, buttered croutons floating around, have a tempting salad with cream dressing, and a hot buttered roll. And if there is room, take a light dessert like apple tapioca, ice cream or caramel custard.

Dinner at night should be another leisurely meal, nourishing but not too rich. Weight is gained mor easily on simple menus. You might have baked or broiled meat, scalloped or creamed potatoes, a fresh vegetable, bread and butter and a light dessert and beverage.

Increase Menu Slowly

The increase in food should be gradual and the menus should be built around the protective foods. You should have daily: milk, one egg, citrus fruit or tomato juice and one other fruit; at least one green vegetable, potato, a green salad, bread and butter, meat, fish or fowl.

The calorie increase should be largely in milk, whole grains and bread and butter, so that there is no tax at all on the digestion. You will also find that a Vitamin A, B, D capsule daily assists greatly in building up your resistance and your appetite.

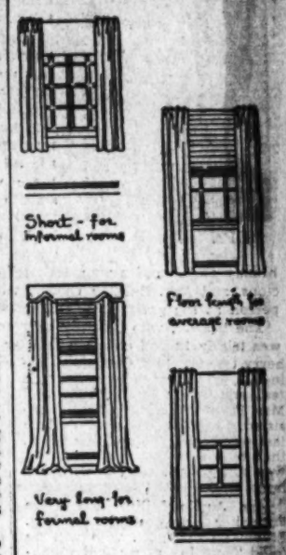
Remember This When Hanging Your Draperies

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.



Draperies are to your windows what a frame is to a picture . . . and should be chosen carefully. If your room is small and abounds in windows, use draperies the color of your walls . . . to lend spaciousness. Draperies are usually floor-length, except in informal rooms. Under any circumstances, do not cut them off at the baseboard, else they'll have an unfinished look. In very formal rooms, draperies may lie on the floor for several inches. Draperies may hang straight or be tied back, but if you do tie them back, be sure the hook is either above or below the center of the window. Draperies may be used on French doors leading to the outside, but never, never use them on French doors leading from one room to another.

Consult "Mary Annette" or one of our other decorators at any time, without obligation or cost to you . . . or if you prefer an appointment, call National 5100, Branch 506.

Mrs. Grady's Tea Party Enlivens Social Whirl

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

What Mrs. Henry F. Grady (Lucretia del Valle Grady) calls "just a small party" is a fair-sized one for anybody else; so when I dropped into her attractive apartment at the Highlands yesterday for a cup of tea, I wasn't surprised to find the "small" stretched to include 50 guests. That's what you might expect of one of Washington's most attractive hostesses, who was reared in the tradition that made her father's Camulos ranch (setting for the novel, "Ramona") famed throughout California as a center of hospitality.

HOPE R. MILLER

Yesterday Mrs. Grady had gathered a number of her friends for a party that was up to the Del Valle standard of hospitality in every respect. There was a gay company, lingering on until a scandalously late hour; there was a table loaded with tempting viands, including dainty heart-shaped sandwiches, and fudge cake; and there was a silver bowl filled with a smooth punch that had everybody begging the hostess for the recipe. Somebody back in 1732 first devised the concoction, which is a blending of cognac, peach brandy and Jamaica rum. It's mild as grape juice and twice as delicious, and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, who was serving it, was the busiest person at the party.

The hostess, who recently returned from a brief trip to New York, was trimly turned out in a powder blue crepe frock, girdled in raspberry taffeta. Mrs. Grady's sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry Diemel, poured tea, and Mrs. Basil Manly and Mrs. Frank Warring generally assisted. Informality from first to last was the keynote of the party, that began around 4 o'clock and was still going strong three hours later.

Mrs. Justin Miller was there with her pretty daughter, Mrs. Edwin Ball Abbott, who will be feted Thursday at a small luncheon given by Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, who also was among those present yesterday. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson arrived with Miss Mary V. Johnson, and Mrs. J. Fred Essary came in a few minutes later accompanied by Mrs. William A. Morgan. Mrs. Raymond Clapper, in a snappy black spring hat swathed in a veil, was there; also Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Francis Colt de Wolf, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Albert E. Carter and Mrs. David M. Shreve and Mrs. May Thomas Evans—to mention but a few.

First Lady Plans 'Spring Vacation'

Off to New York tonight, Mrs. Roosevelt has a full schedule from now until Monday, but after that she plans a "spring vacation" from speech-making, from reporters, and from engagements in general.

Accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., she will visit the NYA project in Penn Yan, N. Y., tomorrow and then go on from there to Ithaca to attend meetings in connection with farm and home week at Cornell University. She will speak in Philadelphia on Monday at the meetings where the annual Bok award will be presented, and after that will divide her time between New York City and Hyde Park, "just having a good time."

Mrs. Roosevelt will be back in Washington in time to attend the annual dinner and stunt party of the Women's National Press Club on March 3, and she will have her next press conference the following day at 11 o'clock.

Next Lecture Tour Begins March 5

The First Lady's next lecture tour, which will take her to the South, through the Southwest and to California, will begin March 5. Her first speech is scheduled for Natchez, Miss., on March 7; she will go from there to Texas, and she will wind up the tour March 25 in San Jose, Calif. From there she will go by plane to Seattle for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger.

At yesterday's press conference she reported that the President is rapidly recovering from his cold and will resume his regular schedule before the week is over.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The Fiscal Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor have cards out for dinner on February 22 . . . Mme. Hironouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, has invited a few friends for tea on Saturday afternoon . . . Mrs. William O. Douglas will entertain at luncheon on Thursday . . . Mrs. O. Max Gardner, wife of the former Governor of North Carolina, will give a luncheon in compliment to Mrs. John W. Hanes on Friday, February 24 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thach will give an informal buffet supper tomorrow evening in compliment to Oswaldo Aranha, Brazil's Foreign Minister . . . Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley will entertain at tea on Sunday afternoon in compliment to Representative and Mrs. Lansdale Sasscer . . . On the same afternoon, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West will give a tea in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck.

Women's Press Club To Honor Envoys And Their Wives

The Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted and the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne will be honor guests of the Women's National Press Club at its luncheon today in the Cabinet Room of the Willard Hotel.

The Minister of Denmark will discuss plans for the visit of the Crown Prince Frederick and Princess Ingrid, of Denmark, to this country in May; and the Minister of Norway will talk on the visit, also in May, of Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha, of Norway.

George T. Summerlin, the State Department's chief of protocol, also had planned to attend the luncheon but will not be there because of illness.

Alexandria Girl Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. F. Vaughan Pultz, of Alexandria, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kathryn Eugenia Pultz, to Robert Hunter Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson, of Anacostia.

Both Miss Pultz and Mr. Thompson are graduates of the University of Maryland. Miss Pultz is a member of Delta Delta Delta social sorority. Mr. Thompson is a member of Beta Alpha Psi, accounting fraternity.

Mourning for Pope Delays Diplomatic Fete

Due to official mourning for Pope Pius XI, the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil have canceled their reception, which was to have taken place this afternoon.

They will postpone the event until after Lent.

First Lady Heads Society Set At Opening of Opera Series

Hurbans, Erteguns and Mme. Naoumoff Also Attend Presentation of 'The Bartered Bride;' Ernest Lindleys, Miss Thompson With Mrs. Roosevelt

A distinguished audience, headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, attended the opening last evening at Constitution Hall of a series of operas, of which "The Bartered Bride," by the Czech composer, Smetana, was first. The Czech-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban occupied a box and had with them the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun and Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who entertained at a small dinner before the opera, took her guests along with her. They were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Miss Malvina Thompson and Col. Henry Osthagen.

Other prominent boxholders included Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Kleberg, Mrs. Clarence Hancock and Mrs. Sol Bloom. With Mrs. Bloom were her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; the Minister of Uruguay, J. Richling, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

With Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart in their box were Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, one of the most active workers for the National Symphony Association; Miss Anne Randolph and Miss Eloise Sargeant.

Mrs. French Meyers had with her her debutante daughter, Miss Emily Meyers, and Miss Ruth Dove, John Seegar, William Fitzgerald and Igor Cassinio. Miss Barbara Bolling entertained at dinner before the performance, later taking her guests to Constitution Hall. They were the Misses Aileen Wrightson, Margaret Weems and Clement Conger, Capt. Robert Williams and Lieut. James Totten.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea also entertained at dinner before the performance, later joining Miss Cornelia Bowie in her box. In this group were Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Kemp Slaughter, Gen. John Philip Hill and Mrs. Wilson Lee.

Other boxholders were Dr. William McClellan, president of the National Symphony Association; Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. John Dwight, who had in her party Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege and several other friends; Mrs. Marion Warburg, Mrs. William Shearer, Mrs. Louis Pitcher, Miss Belle Snyder, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who had taken two boxes for the occasion; Mrs. Gerry Johnson and Princess Boncompagni.

Dinner Honors Nelson Johnson

The United States Ambassador to China, Nelson T. Johnson, was guest of honor at a men's dinner given last night by the Military Attache of the Chinese Embassy, Col. Teh-Chuan Kuo. The party took place at the Mayflower.

The guests were Senator David Walsh, Senator Elmer Thomas, Senator Josh Lee, Representative Wesley Disney, Representative Phil Ferguson, Representative James A. Shanley, Representative Robert G. Allen, Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, Maj. Gen. Robert Danford, Bishop Paul Yu-Pin, Bishop of Nanking, and Dr. Chang-Lok Chen, Counselor of the Embassy.

Also Col. Emmanuel Lombard, Military Attache of the French Embassy; Col. Ivan Leontovich Okunev, Assistant Military Attache of the Soviet Embassy; Col. E. R. W. McCabe, Capt. W. R. Monroe, Maxwell Hamilton, Col. Charles Busbee, Joseph W. Ballantine, Raymond E. Mackay, Dr. James Yu, Chinese Consul General in New York, and Maj. Sinju Pu Hsiao and J. Z. Huang of the embassy staff.

Elizabeth Dame Engaged to Wed

Mrs. William Page Dame, of Baltimore, announces the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth, to Samuel Stevens Sands, of Fiddlers Green Farm, near Middleburg, Va.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of the late Dr. William P. Dame of Christ Church, Baltimore, attended St. Catherine's School in Richmond and St. Margaret's School at Tappahanock, Va.

Mr. Sands is the son of Mrs. Richard Whitney of New York and the late Samuel Sands, of New York. He attended Groton and was graduated from Harvard University. For the past five years he has been living in Middleburg. Mr. Sands at one time was betrothed to the former Miss Ann Clark, of Boston, who broke her engagement to him to marry John Roosevelt.

Elizaldes Are Hosts At a Dinner Party

Joaquin M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippines, and Mrs. Elizalde entertained at a dinner party last evening at their apartment at the Shoreham.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, former Senator and Mrs. Harry Bartown Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Peyton Hawes and Fernando de la Guardia.

Aranha Honored By Morgenthau

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., entertained at a men's dinner last evening at his residence, 2211 Thirtieth street, in honor of Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Foreign Minister.

The guests were the Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy here, Mario da Costa Guimaraes; Jefferson Caffery, United States envoy to that country; Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce; Senator Key Pittman, Representative Sol Bloom, Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State; Dr. Herbert Feis, economic advisor to the State Department, and Ellis O. Briggs, acting chief of the Division of American Republics.

Their guests were Col. and Mrs. O'Connor, of Fort Belvoir, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Kochenderfer, Representative and Mrs. Frank Gorton, Mrs. Lola K. Gingrich, Mr. and Mrs. George Colison, Mr. and Mrs. William MacDonald, Dr and Mrs. P. L. Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Carter and Mr. and Mrs. William M. Mooney.

Mr. McKinley has constructed a specially arranged brick oven for roasting oysters and the oysters, themselves, were a product of his own private beds planted several years ago.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

LOCAL stag lines always pep up a bit with the annual convening of the State Department Foreign Service School, which takes place at this time of year. Of 17 students in the current course, only six are married. All are members of the Foreign Service who are called back to study after their first tour of duty is up. The only sad note, as far as the debutantes are concerned, is that they have to devote many evenings to homework and have to write a 15,000 word essay before the course ends late in April.

DUDLEY HARMON

Of the couples who are here, one of the most attractive is Mr. and Mrs. William Cole, who have come from Vancouver. Mrs. Cole was active in radio work before her recent marriage, but now her career seems to be typing her husband's lecture notes, as the State Department forbids wives of its officials to get jobs in other countries. We understand that even those wives with literary inclinations would have to submit their writings to the department before anything was published.

Mrs. John R. Williams, who though in her seventies runs half a dozen business enterprises and at least that many charities, can even take a night club in her stride. She turned up at the Pirate's Den the other evening accompanied by two other ladies, and they occupied a ringside table.

Washington society has discovered since the Den opened that the place simply crawls with atmosphere such as a brig, an orchestra leader in a Capt. Kidd velvet suit and three-cornered hat, and pirates galore who stage impromptu cutlass fights on the dance floor. Capt. Don Dickerman, the owner, who looked very bloodthirsty the other evening in a ragged pirate outfit with a hat with plumes and crossbones, somewhat stepped out of character as he sat with some of the guests by drinking—milk.

LA GRIPPE Department: The luncheon which Arthur Vandenberg, jr., had planned for last Sunday in honor of Betsy Barton, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, had to be postponed as the host and three-fourths of the prospective guests fell ill with flu. Mrs. Vandenberg is in Atlantic City recuperating from the grippe and will not be "at home" on Thursday . . . Mrs. George Grant Mason's plans to go skiing this week with Mrs. Grover Loening have been somewhat upset by a bad cold. She is now considering Palm Beach instead.

THE Danish Minister, Otto Wadsted, expects to go to the West Coast next month to meet his country's Crown Prince and Princess who arrive in California April 6. He will accompany them as they travel across the country to New York . . . Much to her mother's surprise, Peggy Townsend's career as a night club singer is continuing at a great rate. Mrs. Townsend admits that she thought Peggy would last about a week at the Cafe Caprice, but she has been there for almost two months. The management is delighted with her work and shows no signs of letting her go.

SEVERAL friends of Mrs. Granger Blair gathered in her Georgetown apartment yesterday to see her recently completed portrait by Bjorn Egli. The artist, who was present, received many compliments on his work, which is a three-quarter length study. Mr Egli, who is a naturalized Norwegian, has also "done" Sir Willmott Lewis, debutante Patricia Morris, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, and many other Washingtonians.

He is now at work on a portrait of Mrs. Harold Sims, who was among the guests yesterday, wearing a blue suit and becoming hat to match. Others present were E. Pendleton Turner, Mrs. William MacCracken, in a gray tailored suit with a silver fox scarf. Mrs. Mondell Gregg, who lives in the same small apartment house as her hostess; John Hume, Mr. Sims and Mme. Egli, who is also a talented painter.

Cabinet Wives Fete First Lady

Another in the series of luncheons given annually in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt by ladies of the Cabinet took place yesterday when Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, entertained for the First Lady.

Present at the luncheon were three house guests of Mrs. Woodring: her sister, Mrs. Robert Greenwood, of Fitchburg, Mass.; Mrs. William Cowgill, of Southport, Conn., and Miss Ruth Graftstron, of New York.

Others present were Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army; Mrs. Herbert R. O'Conor, wife of the Governor of Maryland; Mrs. Jay Benedict, whose husband, Gen. Benedict, is superintendent of West Point; Mrs. George H. Dern, and Mrs. Duke Shoop.

Secretary and Mrs. Woodring had guests at dinner last evening and they will entertain at another dinner this evening, later taking their guests to the opera. Tomorrow Mrs. Woodring will have the "at home" which was postponed last week because she and her husband were moving to the Shoreham at that time.

Houghtelings Give Dinner Honoring Wife of Envoy

The Commissioner of Immigration, J. L. Houghteling, and Mrs. Houghteling entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Mrs. Jefferson Caffery. Mr. Caffery, United States Ambassador to Brazil, attended the dinner given by the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, jr., for the Brazilian Foreign Minister, Oswaldo Aranha.

There were 16 in the company last evening. Mrs. Houghteling knew Mrs. Caffery when both lived in Chicago.

S. C. Foley to Wed Miss Vivian Kelsey

Bertram Cecil Kelsey, sr., of Washington, announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Vivian Marjorie Kelsey, to Stewart Castell Foley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Daniel Foley.

Miss Kelsey attended Southeastern University. Mr. Foley attended Devitt Preparatory School and Catholic University, where he was quarterback on the varsity football team. He is a member of the Circle Club, Delta Sigma, Senators Club and the C. U. Letter Club.

The wedding will take place in May at Sacred Heart Church.

Wilsons Plan Party

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson will entertain at a cocktail party on Saturday at their apartment on Fifteenth street. Mrs. Wilson is the former Miss Rose Page.

'At Home' Set By Mrs. Pepper

Mrs. T. Lansing Snyder, sister of Mrs. Claude Pepper, will receive with Mrs. Pepper at her "at home" on Thursday. Mrs. Snyder has been visiting here from her home in Jacksonville, Fla., for the past several days.

Assisting Mrs. Pepper at the tea tables during the afternoon will be Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Mrs. Malin Craig, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Albert H. Blanding, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Hugo Black and Miss Pauletta Guffey.

Generally assisting will be Mrs. Lister Hill, Miss Frances Boykin, Mrs. Frank Wideman, Mrs. Harry Buckman, Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr., and Mrs. Richard Dunn.

The event will be given at the new apartment of Senator and Mrs. Pepper at 1661 Crescent place, into which they moved from Wardman Park Hotel on Febduary 1.

Miss Joan King, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter King, spent the week-end here from her studies at Sweet Briar College. She had with her two classmates, Miss Mimi Galloway, of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss Elizabeth Knowlton, of Hinsdale, Ill. The three attended the recent Valentine hop at the Naval Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Baker and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Robertson, of Toronto, are at the Dodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Norris, of Amherst, N. H., are at the Dodge. Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Norton, of Watertown, Conn., are also stopping there.

Giuseppi Bentonelli, who is appearing in the series of operas being presented here this week, is at the Hotel Raleigh.

Mrs. Louise Caldwell to Give Serum 'Bank' Bridge Party Today

Mrs. Louis Caldwell is among those who will be hostesses today at luncheon bridge parties in their own homes for benefit of the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital.

Those attending will bring various "spreads" for a co-operative luncheon and the "menu" will be set out on a large buffet.

Mrs. Warren Austin is one of the many who will have guests at the party as is also Mrs. Ollie James. They will bring with them Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Josiah Bailey, Mme. Emanuel Dimitriu, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Jack Beall, Mrs. Ralph Smith and Mrs. Lester Wilson. Mrs. Thad Brown will have as her guests Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Edward Gann and Mrs. Oscar Luhring.

Mrs. George Romney will bring with her Mrs. William Morgan, Mrs. Gilmer Korner and Mrs. Kingman Brewster, and Mrs. George C. Thorpe will have Mrs. Emerson Howe and Mrs. William Fitzkelly. With Mrs. Clinton Tribby will be Mrs. Joseph Byrnes and Mrs. John Overton.

Still others who will attend the benefit luncheon bridge at Mrs. Caldwell's home will be Mrs. Charles Pynchon, Mrs. Arthur Scharfeld, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Edward Goodrich, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Miss Maxine Davis, Mrs. Xavier Vigeant, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Robert Frear, Mrs. Alva Adams, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Fred Essary, Mrs. Ira B. Business Women's Club Indorses Local Suffrage

Mrs. Ottenberg, W. H. Mondell, Frank Waldrup, Alfred Calvert, Mrs. E. M. Pryse and G. W. Ayers Debate Question Before Ballot

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Local suffrage and national representation for the District was indorsed by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington last night by a vote of 36 to 20. The vote was taken following a panel discussion, with Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters, William H. Mondell, president of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association, and Frank Waldrup, presenting arguments in favor, and Alfred D. Calbert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens' Association; Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, member of the legislative committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Grover W. Ayers, author of a history of the suffrage movement, against it.

Mary Steele (Mrs. George Ross), director of the women's and professional division of the local WPA, presided and summaries of the arguments were given by two members of the George Washington University debate council, Miss Elsie Carper, president, for the affirmative and Stewart Russell, for the negative. Miss Nina Kinsella, president of the club, opened the meeting which was its regular monthly session.

Sentiment Divides On Separate Issues

There were 62 votes cast at the close of the forum. The 36 in favor of local suffrage and national representation were divided on the question of local suffrage alone, with 21 in favor and 19 opposed, and on national representation alone, 15 for and 19 against.

Of those voting, 20 were legal residents of the District. Of the remaining 42, there were 10 who indicated they would become legal residents if suffrage were granted, while 30 would not.

Mr. Mondell, the first affirmative speaker, based his support on the principle of democracy. The Revolution, he said, was the protest of the colonies against interference with their local rights. Local suffrage should precede national representation he argued.

Mr. Calvert, who followed him, declared he could not fathom the attitude of those who wanted to forsake the comparative peace of the present form of government "for the privilege of voting once a year for hand-picked candidates of a group of conniving politicians. They would rather have bad government with suffrage than good government without it."

He recommended the citizen's associations as more satisfactory means of getting what the people of the District want than exercise of the franchise.

Mrs. Ottenberg called attention to the indorsement of suffrage for the District by the Federation of Citizens' Associations. She answered the charge of corruption in politics, with the fact that the District was governed by men elected under the political system everywhere else in the Union but here, and, on the racial question gave the ratio of white people to colored in the District as 3 to 1.

"I cannot share Mr. Calvert's contentment with conditions in the District," she said, calling attention to the Griffenhagen report which lists lack of self-government as one of the city's problems; the chiseling on relief because of inadequate appropriations and staff to handle the situation; the "dumping of children in institutions" because it is cheaper than employing case workers and caring for them in homes.

"We cannot even spend our own money to look after our own children," she said, asserting the District paid as much in taxes as 11 States combined and as much as any one of 26 States separately.

Blame Newspapers As One-Sided

Mrs. Pryse and Mr. Ayers devoted their arguments chiefly to charges that the newspapers had been unfair in giving columns of space to propaganda in favor of suffrage but had printed practically nothing on their side of the question. Mrs. Pryse quoted extensive figures on this point. She also explained that she had become interested in opposing suffrage and national representation through being assigned the negative in a debate on the question before the Marietta Park Woman's Club, of which she is president. Both alluded also to the influence of the colored vote.

The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Pryse explained has indorsed suffrage.

Mr. Waldrup, dealing with references which had been made to Washington's large colored population and its possible control, quoted census figures showing a decrease from 33.1 per cent of the total population when the organic act for the District was signed by the President in 1878, to 27.1 per cent in 1930. He pointed out also that the principle involved was one of democracy.

An aircastle that keeps its feet on the ground is the penthouse "estate" of Regina Jais, writer and world traveler, now a visitor in Washington. It is located on Fifth avenue at Eighty-third street, in New York City, and includes a garden which grows everything from corn and tomatoes to cherry trees. The picture of Mrs. Jais in her garden was, of course, taken in the summertime.

Fries Fears U. S. Dictatorship Over Education

The bill now in Congress providing Federal aid for education was assailed yesterday by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, in an address before the Army-Navy Chapter of the D. A. R. as a "threat to our whole school system, and through it, to the Nation."

"This educational program will start with nursery schools, continue through kindergarten, public schools, colleges and university, along with workers schools, adult schools and libraries, to catch everyone from the cradle to the grave," he said. "The billion dollar cost is a minor issue, huge as it looms, with threats of even greater appropriation.

"You can't support a dictator with 49 separate school systems. State rights is now and ever has been the basis of our national scheme of government. This bill would make a complete dictator in education."

Gen. Fries was introduced by Mrs. George R. Harrington, regent of the chapter. There was also a report on national defense by Miss Blanche Stanley.

Among those who attended the luncheon were Mrs. David Rumbough, Mrs. William Carter, Miss F. Frances Webster, Mrs. John L. Homer, Mrs. N. W. Dawley, Mrs. John Hines, Mrs. Oliver Spaulding, Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mrs. Robert L. Howze, Mrs. Hubert Paddock, Mrs. Rex Rhoades, Mrs. R. M. S. Wortley, Mrs. Theodore Pierson, Mrs. Joseph A. Suttle, Mrs. George Joseph Newgarden.

'If We Democrats Split, We're Sunk,' Sumners Tells Club

"If we Democrats split, for or against Roosevelt, then we are sunk. If we Democrats and Republicans get to fighting among ourselves, the country is sunk." With these words, Representative Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, warned members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday of grave problems facing America today.

Representative Sumners, who has served in Congress contiuously for 26 years and is now chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, declared "our job now is to save this Government. We need a politieal truce if we are to get to shore. We must get together and rededicate ourselves to our country."

Daughters of 1812 To Meet Today

The District of Columbia Society, United States Daughters of 1812 will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue northwest, with Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Motion Picture Council of the District of Columbia, as guest speaker.

Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, former president of the society, will have charge of the history study feature, talking on "The Octagon House and the Treaty of Ghent" The treaty was signed February 17, 1815, in the Octagon House which was the temporary home of the President following the burning of the White House during the War of 1812. The Daughters of 1812 have placed a tablet in Octagon House commemorating the signing of the treaty which terminated the war.

Guests of the society will be Mrs Colden Ruggles, national president of the Guadalupe Club of 1848, and Mrs. Irving Fairweather, national president of the American War Mothers.

Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. Robert S. Mackinnon, Mrs. Andrew Johnson, jr., and Mrs. Katherine Billings.

The president, Mrs. Lane Schofield, will preside.

Regina Jais, World Traveler, And Her 'Pal' Visiting Here

Author Is Writing Book on Her Amazing Hobby, "Sky Gardening;" Also Preparing A Volume on Legendary Egypt

Writer, gardner, world traveler, philosopher—Regina Jais is all of these and it is hard to say which classification should come first. She and her husband, J. D. Jais, "my pal" of her travel books, are in Washington for a few days, having come from New York as is their custom each season to observe Lincoln's birthday, for the date coincides with that of both her own and her mother's.

A few years ago, Mrs. Jais was awarded the prize of the National League of American Pen Women for her "Legendary France—Carcassonne and the Basque Country," as the best book on narrative travel written by an American woman that season.

She is now working on one which deals with her remarkable hobby "Sky Gardening" and also is writing another of her travel series, "Legendary Egypt—Palestine, Past and Today."

"Legendary Germany," written several years ago, is another of these books.

They are not the statistical kind of travel guide nor do they dictate to the tourist the "musts" for his journey. They are pleasant narratives of a traveler whose interest in people and places has led her and her "pal" into unusual spots and unlocked for her their stories.

Mrs. Jais writes from the standpoint of her reader's interest. "Readers are not always agreeable to your ideas," she said, "put yourself in the place of the reader and don't be too absorbed with what you've done."

In addition to her writing and traveling, Mrs. Jais finds time for gardening and with it has developed a philosophy as to the relation of gardens and the gardener.

"Anyone who gives a plant the love and care it deserves can have a garden," she says, "—even if it is a single lily bulb or a 10-cent geranium on the windowsill. Tending one flower and watching it grow affords the same satisfaction and inspiration as having a real garden plot."

The fact that she lived in a New York penthouse was no hindrance to her own urge to have a garden. Instead it was a challenge. She met it with her "sky garden" where tomatoes, corn, grapes and other fruits and vegetables grow in season and a double cherry tree blooms at the same time as those around the Tidal Basin here. Her roof-top "estate" on Fifth avenue at Eighty-third street, overlooking Central Park, includes three rock gardens, and every stick and stone has been placed according to her own planning.

True to her profession as a writer, she looked to the garden page of a newspaper for instruction when she first began her "sky garden", 14 years ago, and credits advice in the New York press with its success.

In her forthcoming book which will be out in the late spring, she will describe what she has done and give details for the benefit of those who want to follow her example. Pictures will prove that her penthouse with its "grounds" is an aircastle come true.

Rep. Gearhart to Speak

Representative Bertrand Gearhart, of California, will talk on "National Defense" Friday morning at 11:45 at the meeting of the committee on national defense through patriotic education of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution. He will be guest of honor at the luncheon following. Mrs. Frank H. Towner is chairman of the committee.

Bank Expert Sees Further Recovery

M. S. Szymczak Tells Creditmen Trade Outlook Is Bright

Further recovery of American business from the recession of last year was predicted by Menc S. Szymczak, member of the Federal Reserve Board, at the opening session of the Columbia Regional Conference of the National Retail Credit Association at the Mayflower yesterday.

"A year ago business activity and prices had been declining for several months . . . Now, however, we have seen not only a slowing down in the decline of the first half of 1938, but a sharp advance in business generally."

Prospects for a continuation of the business recovery of recent months "are reasonably encouraging at the present time," asserted Szymczak.

Income payments are at the level of late 1937 and only 6 per cent below the peak in the middle of that year, Szymczak said. Pay rolls, however, although rising sharply since the midsummer low, are substantially below the 1937 point, he pointed out.

Industrial output has maintained itself at a "fairly high level" for three months, he said.

Although aided in nonresidential areas by a rise in public works contracts, the building construction field has felt sharp reverses in the last year, Szymczak pointed out.

American exports exceed imports by $100,000,000 a month, an unusually large margin, he said. Decline in exports stopped with the beginning of business recovery in the second half of 1938.

At an evening banquet, E. Barrett Prettyman, former Corporation Counsel of the District, told 200 delegates, representing credit associations in the District and Middle Atlantic States, that good faith is a prerequisite of success in modern business. Mark Lansburgh, secretary of Lansburgh & Bros., was toastmaster.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

A. Conti Berenguer presents Bedrich Smetana's "Prodana Nevesta," sung in English as "The Bartered Bride," in Constitution Hall Monday night. The cast:

Marenka ..... Josepha Chekova
Hans ..... Ivan Velik
Wenzel ..... George Rasely
Kezel ..... Francis Barnard
Krushina ..... Robert Kelson
Katinka ..... Mary Barova
Micha ..... Lloyd Harris
Hata ..... Clelia Fioravanti
Esmeralda ..... Berenice Alarie
Conductor: Angelo Canarutto.

With a lively performance of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" in Constitution Hall last evening, A. Conti Berenguer inaugurated a series of four operas which will bring forward Puccini's "La Boheme" tonight, "Lohengrin" on Wednesday and Massenet's "Manon" on Thursday. Considering the inadaptability of the stage to the mechanics of the theater, the presentation was ingenious in the makeshifts that produced a fair illusion of the reality. Production under such a handicap indicates a commendable ambition to provide us with opera, and Mr. Berenguer deserves commendation for this as well as for his previous efforts.

Smetana's folk comedy is the only one of his operas which has been exported to this country, and it is strange that its melodic attractiveness and its racy flavor have not encouraged some impresario to try one of the others. The music is rich in tunes and alive with rhythm, and its national character gives it a peculiar zest. It was Smetana's hope to establish a Czech school of opera, and into his music he put authentic racial traits.

Singing honors in last evening's performance went to Joseph Chekova in the role of Marenka. Her voice has a pleasing lyricism and she uses it effectively, while her impersonation of the maiden distraught by a marriage broker had piquancy. Ivan Velik was occasionally sonorous as Hans, but his voice was for the most part subdued.

George Rasely, who came from the Metropolitan to take the part of the stuttering half-wit, Wenzel, brought down the house with his drollery. Francis Bernard essayed his barytone voice in the basso role of Kezal, the marriage broker, with the result that many of his lines were inaudible beyond the first few rows.

Angelo Canarutto conducted the vivacious work with a spirit that kept the pace unflagging. It would have been well, however, if he had toned the orchestra down a bit, for one heard complaints between acts that the singers were being overwhelmed.

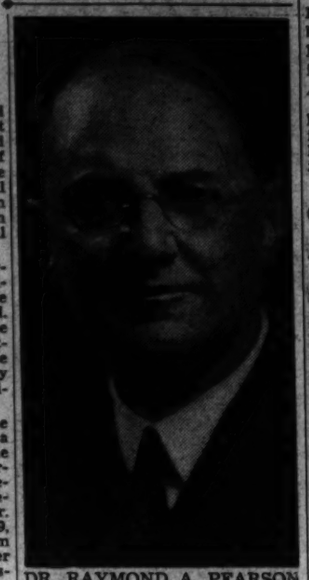
Dr. Pearson's Rites Tomorrow; Former Maryland U. Head

Educator Also Held Post Here as Aide in Agriculture Bureau



DR. RAYMOND A. PEARSON

Funeral services for Dr. Raymond Allen Pearson, 65, former president of the University of Maryland and one time an assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who died at his home in Hyattsville, Md., yesterday, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. Burial will be private.

A prominent educator, Dr. Pearson was president of Iowa State College from 1912 to 1926 when he came to the University of Maryland. Resigning in 1935, he went into the Government service as special assistant and technical adviser to the administrator of the Farm Security Administration. He held this position at the time of his death.

Dr. Pearson's resignation from the University of Maryland followed a three-months' investigation by the board of regents of an alleged lowering of academic standards. He declined an offer of the board to remain as an administrative adviser.

Born in Evansville, Ind., April 9, 1873, Dr. Pearson graduated from Cornell University, where he later served as professor of dairy industry. He was assistant chief of the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture at the turn of the century.

From 1908 to 1912 he served as commissioner of agriculture for New York State and during the war was one of the Assistant Secretaries of Agriculture. He is a former president of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities and for many years was chairman of the executive committee. He held the honorary degrees of doctor of laws from Alfred University and doctor of agriculture from the University of Nebraska.

Dr. Pearson leaves his wife, Mrs. Fanny Dunsford Pearson and a daughter, Ruth.

Honorary pallbearers will include Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Will W. Alexander, Farm Security Administrator; Dr. A. F. Woods, also a former president of the University of Maryland; Dr. H. J. Patterson, former dean of the College of Agriculture; Dr. C. W. Warburton, Eugene Mason, William W. Everett, Dr. C. B. Smith, Albert L. Barrows, Dr. T. B. Symons, of the University of Maryland; Louis Bliss, and Dr. A. R. Mann.

Active pallbearers will be William H. Savin, Carl Shemann, Paul V. Maris, Merrit Green, Prof. Francis B. Lincoln and A. H. Seidenspinner.

C. M. Nicholson Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Charles M. Nicholson, retired Navy Yard employe and lifelong resident of Southeast Washington, who died Sunday, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Daniels, 1240 Eleventh street southeast, the Rev. George H. Bennett, pastor of the Wilson Memorial Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Nicholson, who was 82, and a former member of the Metropolitan Police Force, was married to the former Mary E. Kyle in 1883. She died in 1925.

Surviving are three other daughters, Mrs. Harry Estep, Mrs. Harry Odell and Mrs. Lawrence Warner, and two sons, Paul W., of the Detective Bureau, and Charles M., jr.

Jane J. Corbey's Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Miss Jane J. Corbey, 64, former employe of Harriman & Co., brokers, will be held today in St. Thomas' Apostle Church, Twenty-seventh street and Woodley road northwest. The Rev. Robert L. Kessler will officiate. Burial will be in St. Joseph's Church Cemetery, Ammendale, Md.

Miss Corbey died at her home, 1840 Mintwood place northwest, Sunday morning.

Surviving are four sisters: Miss Mary Corbey; Mrs. R. B. Shipley, Mrs. Trese Shaw and Mrs. E. T. Reamy; three nieces, Miss Jean Corbey, Mrs. Luis Rivera and Mrs. Ruth McGuire, all of Washington.

Bishop Francis, Indianapolis, Dies

Indianapolis, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Rt. Rev. Joseph Marshall Francis, 78, bishop of the Indianapolis Episcopal Diocese since 1899 and oldest bishop in the Anglican communion's American branch, died here today.

Bishop Francis, who celebrated his fifty-second year in the church in December, was an Army chaplain in the World War. The widow is the only immediate survivor.

George R. Holmes Funeral Set for 11:30 A. M. Today

High ranking men in official and newspaper life will be honorary pallbearers at the rearranged funeral services at 11:30 a. m. today of George R. Holmes, chief of the Washington Bureau of the International News Service since 1920, in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

A newspaperman since 1914, Mr. Holmes died Sunday of a heart attack at his home, 2338 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He was 44.

John A. Massie, Bank Official, Succumbs at 71

John A. Massie, 71, 4713 Forty-sixth street northwest, vice president and director of the McLachlen Banking Corp., died yesterday.

Mr. Massie was also an officer of the Washington Investment Co., the Brookland Building Association and the Iowa and Ontario Apartment House Companies.

Surviving are his wife, Mary O. Massie, and a sister, Miss Florence Massie, McMinnville, Tenn.

Funeral rites will be at 4 p. m. today at the V. L. Speare funeral home, 1009 H street northwest.

AVOID COLDS

Life Begins at 70 - - - - -

'We Want Ulke,' Many Demand, And Here He Is—a Boy at 72

DR. TITUS ULKE Post Staff Photo.

Life Has Been Full: He Scaled Mt. Blanc, Trailed Renegade Sioux; Today He Is a Writer

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

There have been few duplications of subject among the hundreds of nominations for "Life Begins at 70" which have been received by letter and telephone but a notable exception has been the name of Dr. Titus Ulke. At least six persons wrote or 'phoned: "We want Ulke."

Dr. Ulke, if one could get him to stand still long enough to make an observation, might be defined as a chunk of greased lightning called Natoyapi by the Blackfeet Indians and which is equally at home atop Mont Blanc, around a Boy Scout campfire or inside a gold mine.

He Is a Mere 72

He is a mere 72 today but even at 92 he will be ready to leave, at the drop of a hat, on an expedition to climb Mount Everest, teach Brahms to Zulu tribesmen or recover the Lusitania's gold from the bottom of the ocean. He is a composite of Huckleberry Finn, Richard Halliburton, and The Spirit of '76. As a boy he must have been a terror.

And so to you who demanded, "We Want Ulke," as well as to other readers who may think 70 and senility are synonymous, here he is, one of the rootin'est, tootin'est, swashbucklin'est young blades on foot today.

Dr. Ulke, who has been entitled to that prefix ever since 1934 when he received his Ph. D. in botany from Catholic University, is not content to rest on his laurels: Conqueror of Mont Blanc, highest summit in Europe, honorary medicine man of the Blackfeet, identifier of a species of seaweed fossil, author of a textbook on electrolytic copper refining methods and naturalist de luxe. He feels that his career is just gaining momentum and he has big plans for archeological explorations in Virginia this summer, translating into English a German book on minerals, classifiying his large collection of mineralogical specimens and doing many more things.

An 'Angle' on Anything

Dr. Ulke can supply an "angle" on practically anything, which makes him the newspaperman's delight. Mention Abraham Lincoln's birthday and he points out that his father, as a bachelor, was a roomer in the Tenth street house across from Ford's Theater where the President was brought after he was shot and in which he died.

Talk about the present international unrest and he recalls that he was marooned in Europe when the World War broke out and, while waiting for the Atlantic to be made safer against submarines, whiled away several months trotting through Turkey, Greece and Egypt.

Bring up the subject of music and he is launched upon a discussion of Brahm's genius as a composer. But it isn't necessary to prod Dr. Ulke, for he is constantly in a state of effervescence. Being a Boy Scout counselor, caretaker of the rock garden at the John Dickson home and guide for a local hiking club provides him with plenty conservational material of contemporary interest, not to mention the exciting events of the past.

It may be anomalous that Dr. Ulke is a resident of the John Dickson Home for aged men but that he is, the live wire of the household. When he was working for his doctor's degree at Catholic University he walked 12 miles daily between the two places, coming home for lunch and again in the evening.

His Own Rock Garden

In the accompanying picture he is shown in the rock garden which he built on the south grounds of the home, inspecting a new shoot on the tree cactus which he planted. He got the plant in a swap at the Boy Scout jamboree here a couple of summers ago.

Dr. Ulke was born in Washington on October 17, 1866. He attended Columbian College, now George Washington University, on a scholarship. Subsequently he went to Germany to study mining and metallurgy at the Royal Academy of Mines, digging coal to help meet expenses.

In 1890 he was in South Dakota as a chemist and assayer and in the following year he was a volunteer mounted scout tracking down renegade Sioux. Later he went to the Anaconda Copper works in Butte, Mont., as an electrolytic chemist, thence to Chicago in 1893 as a metallurgist at the World's Fair.

In 1896 he went abroad and scaled Mount Blanc. A year later he was back in Montana making a topographical survey for what is now Glacier National Park. He served as an assistant inspector of ordnance at various arsenals during the Spanish-American War.

Examiner in Patent Office

For about 13 years, beginning in 1905, Dr. Ulke was an assistant examiner in the Patent Office, meantime studying law by night at George Washington and receiving his bachelor of laws and master of patent laws degrees. He was in Europe on a Government mission, to study business methods of the German and Austrian patent offices, when the outbreak of the World War prevented him from returning to the United States on schedule and resulted in the leisurely excursion to Asia Minor and North Africa.

"I've had a rich life," says this peripatetic bachelor, who is now awaiting publication of his booklet on Indian archeology of the Potomac Valley. "But there's still plenty left to get excited about."

Citizens Ask More Funds For Gallinger

Overcrowding Hit By Four Groups; Two Vote Support Of Local Suffrage

Four District citizens' associations last night urged an increased appropriation for Gallinger Hospital in order to alleviate overcrowded conditions and to increase the staff.

Stanton Park

The Stanton Park Citizens Association reiterated its stand in favor of increased appropriations and larger personnel at Gallinger. It also indorsed a proposed investigation by the House District Committee of the advisability of replacing the present class A liquor stores with Government-owned stores.

In response to a request from the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police for help in soliciting funds, the following committee was appointed: J. P. Farmer, A. M. Panzer, S. M. Chipley, Mrs. W. H. Smith and Curtis E. Chadwick. Twenty-eight new members were admitted to the association.

Parkview

Parkview Citizens Association adopted resolutions asking that Congress create a legislative assembly for the District to be elected by the people and renewing a demand for increased funds to relieve conditions at Gallinger.

Cathedral Heights

Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, addressed the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association on the problem of suffrage in the District. The association reiterated its appeal for local suffrage. A resolution asking Congress for increased Gallinger Hospital appropriations was also passed.

Mrs. Olive Faircloth and Miss Mary E. Stocking were appointed a committee to co-operate in the fund raising campaign for the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club.

Hillcrest

Hillcrest Citizens Association asked the Public Utilities Commission to initiate a supplemental bus route from Branch avenue to Gainsville until the new route is established.

The request was also addressed to Congress urging that a separate building be provided for the overcrowded Anacostia Junior High School and that land be acquired for a grade school. A resolution demanding increased funds for Gallinger Hospital was passed.

West End

Parking meters on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue northwest between Seventeenth and Twenty-second streets were requested by the West End Citizens Association. The association also asked that parking between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. be restricted to two hours in an area bordered by E, L, Twentieth and Twenty-second streets northwest.

The group also asked that provision for 12 additional policemen for Third Precinct be included in the 1940 budget. One hundred additional policemen for the entire district were requested.

Kalorama

Etta L. Taggart, attorney, told Kalorama citizens that, according to her estimate, the Federal Government owes the District government $101,000,000.

She explained her estimate was based on the theory that the Federal Government should pay the District the 40 per cent of local government costs.

The association asked Congress to provide national representation for the District as a part of any program for reorganization of local government. A proposal that Washington also be given local suffrage was turned down by a two-to-one vote.

L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, addressed the organization on taxes.

Piney Branch

A committee to study the relation of the proposed governmental reorganization to District suffrage was appointed by the Piney Branch Citizens Association. G. L. Shorey, association president, will head the group. The citizens also reiterated their approval of removing the tuberculosis hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest and building a new teachers college on the site.

Bridge Parties Swell Hospital Blood 'Bank' Fund

Same Auto Fells Two in Freak Mishap

Man, Woman Hurt; Excited Bystander Pulls Fire Alarm

A young man and a woman were struck down by the same automobile last night as they were crossing Georgia avenue at Webster street northwest.

In another freak crash of a list of traffic mishaps yesterday and last night, a 20-year-old car theft suspect struggled out of Emergency Hospital bed straps momentarily to escape police.

Victims of the Georgia avenue "double" were Mrs. Mellisca Roper, 36, of 801 Varnum street northwest, mother of three children, and Llewellyn Scales, 26, of 1819 G street northwest. In Emergency Hospital Mrs. Roper was discovered to have suffered head and hip injuries, Scales fractures of the hip and leg.

Mrs. Roper's screams drew a score of passersby to the accident scene. One of them, excited, turned in a fire alarm. Police said Joseph M. Bresnahan, 7 Rhode Island avenue northeast, drove the car.

The car theft suspect was captured twice, once by Private M. J. Bridges who spotted the tag numbers on a car that whizzed by just as the theft was being reported to him through a patrol box telephone at Seventh and F streets southwest. The second capture was made about a half-hour later at Nineteenth and G streets northwest by Traffic Policeman William Sanders.

The suspect rolled his car over twice and crashed it against a tree at Third and Constitution avenue while fleeing pursuit by Bridges, who commandeered a taxi. Bridges took him to Emergency Hospital, where he so violently protested treatment for possible injury that an attendant strapped him to a bed.

While the attendant was looking after another patient and while Bridges was telephoning for a wreck car to take what was left of the stolen auto, the suspect broke loose from his bounds and fled. Sanders found him cringing behind a mail box.

Hundreds Invest in Serum Bank At Maryland-Virginia Parties

Thirty Tables of Duplicate Bridge Played at Colonial Village; Federal League Session Tonight

Hundreds "invested" in a blood and serum "bank" for Children's Hospital last night at bridge tournaments in Maryland and Virginia and in smaller private parties in Washington.

At the Columbia Country Club in Montgomery County, seven tables of duplicate and four of "parlor" bridge were played by ticket-holders whose dollars went into the "bank," sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

Thirty tables of duplicate and other varieties of the game were played at the same time in the Community House of Colonial Village, Va., in Arlington County. P. E. Henninger, chairman of the bridge committee, announced that tickets had been sold for at least a half dozen private games and that one group of ticket-holders had chosen to play 500.

A. S. Gardiner and his son, Wilbert Gardiner, were North and South winners in the Columbia Country Club duplicate. A. B. Shelton and F. Clark Brown were in second place for North-South. East-West honors were captured by Mrs. Floyd Toomey and Mrs. R. A. Ridgway, with Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hills second.

Top scorers in "parlor" games were F. W. Stoever, first; H. Glen Phelps, second, and Dr. Thomas Rice, third.

H. T. Peters was in charge of arrangements for the country club party.

Henninger was assisted at Colonial Village by Mrs. R. N. Blake, Mrs. J. W. Dorsey, Mrs. Bernard Jay, Mrs. J. P. Scott, Mrs. C. W. Watts, J. B. Lowell, J. T. Onley and Lewis Tubbs.

The Federal Bridge League's party in the Dragon Room of the Wardman Park Hotel heads the list of tonight's benefit gatherings. A party sponsored by the Washington Bridge League is scheduled for tomorrow night at the Shoreham.

Junior Board of Commerce bridge players will gather in the Annapolis Hotel Friday night under arrangements made by the organization's public health and youth welfare committees.

Proceeds from the larger parties as well as those from smaller parties scheduled at private homes throughout the week will go to the "bank" fund.

Tickets for private parties during the remainder of the week may be obtained at the counter, first floor, Post Building, 1337 E street northwest. Mail requests for tickets with checks or money orders payable to "Children's Hospital Blood and Serum 'Bank' Fund," will be filled immediately, officials in charge announced last night.

Realtors Hear James C. Downs

James C. Downs, president, was the principal speaker at the opening session of the four-day Institute of Real Estate Management at Wardman Park Hotel yesterday.

Members of the faculty of the institute, which will study problems related to management of apartment properties, include H. F. Voell, Washington; Carlton Schultz, Cleveland; Delbert S. Wenzlick, St. Louis, Mo., and Hiram P. Holmes, Detroit.

The lecture course will continue through Thursday. Examinations for admittance to the institute will be given Friday and Saturday.

Homecoming Celebration

A. S. Pratt, local general line sales representative of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., will leave Sunday for Akron, Ohio, to attend the four-day homecoming celebration of the company's fortieth anniversary.

Lincoln's Spirit Lives, Reed Asserts

130th Anniversary Of Martyr's Birth Is Observed at First Congregational

"The spirit of Lincoln will never die in this country," Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, said last night at the observance of the Civil War President's 130th birthday anniversary at the First Congregational Church.

Replacing Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, who was ill, as principal speaker, Representative Reed told the assemblage that "Lincoln by his life and conduct started a chain of consequences which will go on for centuries. If this Republic endures, the example of Abraham Lincoln will be influencing the youth of the Nation 2,000 years from now."

None of the few remaining members of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, was able to attend.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was delivered by Robert D. McElroy, past camp commander, Warren G. Harding Camp, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War. The Marine Band played.

Choice for Bench Opposed by King

The nomination of Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, as associate justice of the United States District Court was reported favorably yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee, but with the dissent of Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

Senator King, who is chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he voted against the President's appointee on two grounds: First, that a District resident should have been chosen and, second, because the Justice Department was violating its own rule in selecting a man over 60 years of age.

Legionnaires to Induct

Ten new members will be inducted into United States Treasury Post, No. 35, American Legion, at 8 o'clock tonight at the New Colonial Hotel, by Robert D. Beeton, commander. Plans for a party at the home of James M. Lowen, membership officer, Hillandale, Md., February 18, will be discussed.

Community Center Casting Players

The Central Community Center's Players Club wants men—any number of them, preferably handsome juveniles—to take part in forthcoming plays, Eileen Fowler, director, announced yesterday. The cast for "Rip Van Winkle" is now being selected. Candidates should apply at Central High, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest.

Syracuse Alumni to Meet

Unemployment compensation will be discussed Thursday at 12:30 p. m. by Paul Batzell, of the Social Security Board, before Syracuse University alumni.

German Exile, 69, Overcome by Gas

Mrs. Mariana Coblenzer, 69-year-old German refugee who has been in this country for only 12 days, was overcome by gas yesterday at her residence, 2422 Fourteenth street northwest, when a gas heater was extinguished by a gust of wind as she slept on a nearby bed. Her condition is not considered serious.

Arizonans Will Dance

Arizona's admission into the Union will be celebrated Thursday by the State Society with a dance at the Shoreham. Representative John R. Murdock, of Arizona, and Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, will speak.

Armed Pair Robs F Street Store; 3d Aids Getaway

James A. Nelligan, 58, manager of Nelligan's Boot Shop, Inc., 922 F street northwest, was the victim of a bold daylight holdup yesterday.

About 2:30 p. m., as throngs of downtown shoppers crowded the busy street, two well dressed white men about 28 years of age entered the store and asked to look at shoes. One drew a pistol and forced Nelligan into a back room. They then rifled the cash register of between $40 and $45 and fled.

A woman witness, who refused to identify herself, told reporters they escaped in a black sedan parked in front of the store. A third man was at the wheel and the motor was running, she said. She did not notice the license numbers.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of the Detective Bureau, who is making a personal investigation of the case, arrived with two detectives shortly after the holdup.

Capital News In Brief

Larry Hart, saxophonist in the Mario di Polo Orchestra in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh Hotel, was being felicitated last night on his marriage this morning to pretty, red-haired Helen Bradley, dancer, whose off-stage name is Helen Katherine Fogarty.

Hart had hoped to keep the marriage a secret.

The ceremony will be performed by Municipal Judge Robert E. Mattingly at 11 a. m. Miss Fogarty's home is Philadelphia, Pa.

Radiophone Demonstrated

A recently developed emergency radio-telephone unit, capable of bridging a gap of as much as 50 miles in broken telephone lines, was demonstrated last night at a meeting of the Institute of Radio Engineers in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

The new unit, an improvement over equipment used in Florida hurricanes of 1933 and 1935, has a combined receiving-transmitting unit, portable antenna, and generator.

Ahoy, Mates! Riot!

"Go to the Pirate's Den—riot call—someone throwing bottles," crackled the police radio last night.

Scout cars, patrols and detectives converged on the scene to find Walter Johnson, famed baseball pitcher, hurling bottles at an iron pirate in the Den's "bottle gallery."

"My score was terrible," said the "Big Train."

Memory Training Classes

Classes in memory training will begin tonight at 8 p. m. at Wesley Hall, 1703 K street under sponsorship of the Washington Institute of Arts and Sciences.

More Awards Are Made To Year's Film "Bests"

1,021 Critics Cast Ballots for Favorites; Billy Rose Draped in Barnum's Mantle; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

WHILE THE ANNUAL POLL of the motion picture critics and commentators of the country conducted by Jack Alicoate's Film Daily, one of the foremost of the industry's trade papers, probably is looked upon as the most significant, nationally, there is another yearly paroxysm of balloting that enlists an even greater participation and possibly reflects a broader cross-section of professional opinion. That is the one engineered by Merle Potter, the energetic motion picture critic of the Minneapolis Journal. Mr. Potter not only concerns himself with determining which was the "best picture" of the year, but also goes in with grim determination to discover which actors and which actresses turned in the best performances.

BELL

Mr. Potter goes about his annual task methodically. First, he sets up a nominating committee that makes initial selections of potential award-winners in each field denominated in the poll. Then he circularizes the writing craft again with a voting list from which they are to make their final selections. This year he even had to go around a third time, because the voting proved to be so close that it looked for a while as if a disinterested bystander might have to be dragged in to cast the deciding ballot.

Mr. Potter is generous to Washington in the matter of his nominating committee. This year it included Judge Andrew R. Kelley, Jay Carmody and this column. As was the case when the Film Daily did its similar chore for the industry, there seems to have been considerable critical unanimity in the final choices for honor awards.

The number of critics voting in the Minneapolis Journal poll was almost twice as large as that taking part in the Film Daily's guessing game—1,021 scriveners made their "X" marks on Mr. Potter's ballots. I didn't know there were that many. Out of this far-flung canvass came approximately the same results as were obtained in the Alicoate survey. The "best picture of the year" was decided upon as Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." That made it practically unanimous.

1,021 Critics Choose Year's Best Performances

The three best performances by actors on the screen were accredited to Spencer Tracy, in "Boy's Town;" Lionel Barrymore, in "You Can't Take It With You," and Robert Morley, in support of Norma Shearer in "Marie Antoinette." The three foremost film actresses were voted to be Bette Davis, for her work in "Jezebel;" Margaret Sullavan, in "Three Comrades," and Norma Shearer, in "Marie Antoinette."

By some odd and inexplicable happenstance, our nomination for the best picture of the year was "Snow White;" the best male acting performances those of Lionel Barrymore, Spencer Tracy and Robert Morley; the best actresses, Bette Davis, Norma Shearer and Margaret Sullavan. But we still can't pick a number that will pay off!

But, insofar as Merle Potter is concerned, there is more than meets the eye in this annual fiesta of his. Knowing something of the technical difficulties and vast amount of detail involved in a national poll of this character, I am aware that he undergoes many a headache getting his machinery in operation and then finally shutting it off without catastrophe. But after it is all over, he gets his, in a manner of speaking. That manner of speaking would be to say that Mr. Potter now will fortify himself with a trunkful of gold medals, parchments, blue ribbons and what not and hie himself to Hollywood to decorate the recipients of his constituents' favor. It must be nice to pin a medal on Miss Davis, Mr. Tracy, Miss Shearer, Miss Sullavan, the eldest of the Barrymores, Walt Disney and all the rest! Maybe some day one of them will pin a medal on him.

Film Society Enters Its Final Half-Season

The Film Society of Washington is about to enter its second half-season. In celebration of this turning of the halfway mark, it announces an interesting list of famous pictures still to be shown. The Film Society, it will be recalled, is a nonprofit group working in co-operation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, that offers its programs in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, on Wednesday nights.

Tomorrow night, the attraction will be "The Last Laugh," deemed by many to be the most notable picture ever made by Emil Jannings, the Brooklyn-born German, whose artistry was removed from the American screen by the advent of sound and the revelation of a Teutonic accent that seemed a little too ponderous for the microphones.

After "The Last Laugh" will come such noteworthy revivals as "The Making of a King," "What Price Glory?" "Robin Hood"—the Douglas Fairbanks production, not the recent Warner Brothers' release, starring Errol Flynn—and "Greed," Erich von Stroheim's impressive picturization of Frank Norris' story of "McTeague."

One is led to believe that the Film Society could do with a few more membership subscriptions at $3 each, for the remaining five programs. They would seem to be eminently worth it. Admiral Mark Bristol is the gentleman to contact in this regard—not this desk—and the address is 1734 F street.

It can't be that late in the year. Or maybe it is. At any rate here comes the annual letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, director of the Community Center Department of the Public Schools of the District, to remind us that another one-act play tournament is scheduled for Roosevelt High School Auditorium, with finals on the night of March 4. The drama desks again are being graciously importuned to act as judges of the finals. Having served in the capacity of judge for several years, this column accepts the honor with pleasure and thanks.

Washington Included in National "Ballerina" Contest

With motion picture enthusiasts all over the country entering the national "Ballerina" contest, which offers a four-week, all-expense trip to Paris as first prize, the Little Theater, where "Ballerina" now is the chief feature of the bill, announces a special subsidiary competition for Washington entrants.

The national grand prize, to be bestowed by Dance Magazine and other sponsors, will be awarded for the best letter of 250 words, or less, on the topic of "What I Liked Best About 'Ballerina,' and Why." Letters must be accompanied by official entry blanks, obtainable in Washington at the Little Theater.

For the three best entries in the National contest, submitted by Washingtonians through the Little Theater, three pairs of toe-dancing slippers are being donated by Rich's Shoe Store. Entries must be postmarked not later than Thursday midnight, February 16, and addressed to the "Ballerina" Contest, Little Theater, Washington, D. C. All local entries will be submitted to those in charge of the national contest.

"Ballerina," now in its second week at the Little, will be continued for a third week, so popular has it proved.

Speaking of the Little, it was with keen regret that her many friends in the Capital learned recently that Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, codirector of the tiny Ninth street house with Abe Tolkins, had sustained a serious and painful scalp wound in a recent automobile accident. Mrs. Miller now is reported to be satisfactorily, but not comfortably, stitched up and on the high road to complete recovery. It was, nevertheless, a very nasty jolt and all of her friends are sorry.

Mr. Phineas T. Barnum had the reputation, in his day, of being the past master of superlative showmanship. His mantle seems now to have draped itself over the midget shoulders of Mr. Billy Rose, who may be physically diminutive but who certainly has inherited all of the Barnum propensities for flamboyant adjectives and high-flown publicity.

Reading Mr. Rose's "News Release No. 605," dedicated to his "Million Dollar Aquacade," planned for the New York World's Fair, is an Olympian experience that leaves one's mental digestion clogged with grandiose and indigestible verbiage.

The 605th announcement of Eleanor Holm's claim to aquatic distinction, a place among the immersed immortals and a pinnacle among the world's beauties will be preserved in this department's permanent archives as a monument to hyperbole.

Inset, Gus Van, of the memorable team of Van and Schenck, who will come to the stage of the Earle Theater on Friday to act as interlocutor in the "Gentlemen, Be Seated," minstrel show devised by Harry Anger.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 13.—The hardest hit by favoritism when our new Governor ruled against low license plate numbers for higher-ups was Daryl Zanuck. He sported "3Z4," but not this year. Wouldn't you think Joe Schenck would have used his influence? Joe was given, without his knowledge, a very important commission on the committee of the World's Fair at San Francisco by the Governor. There's more trouble over these new appointments than will ever meet the eye in print. And very unfair for those who have worked and worked during the last year to make it one of the great things of this whole State. And, make no mistake, it will be.

HEDDA HOPPER

Janet Gaynor and Adrian were chaperoned on that trip to Jamaica by Agnes Foster Wright, the decorator, and Editor Richardson Wright. Incidentally, Wright borrowed the best book I ever had on Russia 18 years ago and never returned it. Hope he sees this! They loved Jamaica, where Janet is lingering on a month longer with her mother. So far no definite date has been set for that marriage.

There's nothing like love to keep one working. Guess that's the reason there are so many long and varied engagements in Hollywood. Anyway, Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward waited years for their wedding, and the minute it happened they both got busy. She's doing "The Lone Wolf." Now they'll probably be years getting a honeymoon. He bought a sable coat to "wrap his baby bunting in" on her birthday, but at the party five flashlight bulbs burst in his face just as he was about to kiss her!

Hollywood's trying to cook up a romance between Sonja Henie and Jack Cooper, to whom she telephones daily. But it's only to get his advice on publicity, interviews and such important things. Smart girl!

That gold cross Bonita Granville is proudly wearing was a gift of Frankie Thomas on her sixteenth birthday.

Hedy Lamarr's canceled all plans for a Sun Valley vacation. The Gene Markey influence working again.

Jeanette MacDonald wasn't the least upset when she heard a commentator exclaim that she and Gene were taking a New York trip to hush gossip. She said, "It happens every year. When news is scarce they always seem to think of the happiest couple first."

Glenda Farrell's maid, Teresa, is back after a six months' vacation in the old country. And now Glenda eats! Seems she has a nervous tummy and nobody is able to prepare food like Teresa. Incidentally, that romance with Tom Lewis has put new sparkle in both their eyes.

What prominent agent is assiduously looking for a special kind of house for his ward—you heard me, his ward! Which has the realtors in stitches. Seems the lady, who is about 30, is terrified of ghosts, so help me! Therefore there must be a connecting door into his quarters. Now, if that isn't a new one, I'll eat it.

Bill Powell isn't in love, except with his tan, which he got on the roof of the hospital.

When I saw Carole Lombard lunching with Joe Pasternack at Universal, I knew it wasn't love. Sure, he's looking for a good story for her—so is every other studio in town. Carole's hit her stride, and all she needs is a story to prove it.

You would have laughed at Connie Bennett's plea with her son Peter's teacher to get him a week's holiday at Palm Springs. Then the blizzard descended and she long-distanced half an hour getting an extension. Incidentally, papers for her divorce are being signed by Hank in Europe now. But she gets her divorce here.

Spring isn't here, but Hollywood has burst out in a rash of new styles. Paramount's Edith Head has designed a Foreign Legion hat with a wimple, the first model being worn by Gary Cooper. When Shirley Ross tried it on the wimple got tangled up in her false eyelashes. You haven't lived until you've seen a false eyelash flap in the breeze like a broken shutter. I caught one at the races the other day and was glad the horses couldn't see it.

When Darryl Zanuck was complaining of the troubles he was having with the Ritz Brothers, a pal said, "Trouble? How would you like to have Warner's Dead-End Kids?"

An extra, who needed the work very badly, after spending two days on the Nazi spy story had such a horrible, graphic dream that he gave up the picture. Starvation to him was easier than persecution.

Is it true that Jimmy Roosevelt will be "Golden Boy?"

Makes Debut

Teaching Gable Dance BringsFame

Clark Gable's success as a hoofer in "Idiot's Delight" made possible the realization of a ten-year ambition for George King, his dance director, who today is negotiating a deal that will establish him as the head of his own dance studio in Beverly Hills.

Following the "Idiot's Delight" preview and the acclaim accorded Gable as a song-and-dance man, King suddenly found himself with a reputation.

For sheer fun, these tired eyes and ears seem not to recall any recent theatrical exhibit so hilariously provocative as the three-act comedy revealed for the first time in Washington by George Abbott in the National Theater last night.

"What A Life," by all preliminary report, followed a familiar groove. It dealt with the adolescent adventures of a high school enrollment, their principal, their instructors and a few extremist characters, thrown in for good comic measure, much after the fashion of "Brother Rat," "Bachelor Born" and other charades that have resorted to the halls of youthful learning for the basis of their appeal.

"What A Life," it seems to me, goes all of its predecessors one better, as the saying goes. While not continuously spontaneous, this latest excursion of George Abbott's into the field of juvenile ebullience compounds so many laughs, is so rich in the humor of both lines and situations and is so naturally and unpretentiously on the side of enlivening and wholesome entertainment as to take its place among the season's foremost vehicles of escape from the bothersome and somber problems of adult living.

It would be difficult to assemble the procedures that comprise the three acts of "What a Life" into any very definite pattern of "plot." The piece has no plot, in the usual sense. It has merely a succession of typical "school days" episodes upon which to hang its claim to distinction as one of the most diverting of modern comedies. These episodes are not too closely-knit, nor do they compile an uninterrupted dramatic narrative, but they are so completely in consonance with the characters, circumstances and events involved as to form a completely amusing design for laughter.

"School Days, School Days"

To catch the full spirit and nostalgic charm of "What a Life" it is necessary to go back to high school. Not all of the ridiculous things that happen in the three acts of the play ever happened to any individual member of the audience, but they add up to such a realistic summary of all intermediate school years as to be unfailing in their tug at memory and their warm regeneration of what probably are cherished in most minds as life's happiest and most harassed years.

The pivotal figure in all that "What a Life" discloses upon the stage is a young lad by the name of Henry Aldrich. Master Aldrich has an infinite capacity for precipitating crises in his own life and the lives of all about him. He it is who is summoned to the principal's office more often than any other pupil in Central High School. There are times when things look pretty black for Henry—especially when it is made to appear that in addition to being a gifted young artist, with an incorrigible penchant for caricaturing all the members of the faculty, he also may be the youngster who has been stealing everything around the school that is not red hot or nailed down, even to the bulky instruments belonging to the members of the school band. To evade the consequences of the predicaments into which he constantly projects himself, he even thinks up fantastic yarns about dying uncles, his mother's sudden loss of weight and other extenuations.

Not only that, but Henry also happens to be in love. He entertains an overweening desire to take little Barbara Pearson to the dance on Friday night! Barbara, meanwhile, is carrying on a very heavy joust with the Holy Bible. Necessarily, there has to be a "hated rival," so Author Clifford Goldsmith—whom one is led to believe is some sort of scholastic functionary himself, writing from first-hand—has supplied that element of conflict in the person of the school's super-ego, George Bigelow. It is a simple, sincere, tremendously humorous and unfaltering'y interesting narrative of young boys and girls that Mr. Goldsmith has woven from these perfectly natural and homely ingredients.

Cast Is Superlative

There were frequent intervals during the performance of "What a Life" last night when this department wondered why it was laughing as stentoriously as it was. The final conclusion was that it must have been the cast. There is no overwhelmingly impressive "acting" to be discovered in the enactment of "What a Life." There are, however, many individual contributions to the ensemble excellence of the play that command commendatory attention.

Foremost in the cast is Eddie Bracken, remembered from "Brother Rat," in the role of Henry Aldrich. The young and tousle-haired Mr. Bracken is a "natural" for this sort of thing. He has an infallible sense of comic approach and a peculiarly deft trick of vocal pyrotechnics that create the comedy's major claim to its high place among the year's most successful laughmakers. The ingenuous role of Barbara Pearson is played with contrasting effectiveness by Connie Nickerson, a small mouse of a girl who fits into the scholastic picture perfectly. George Bigelow—the rat—is done with equal competence by William Blees.

Then there are those who comprise the faculty—Marshall Braford, as the principal, William Mendrek, Lora Rogers, Mildred Todd, Lorraine MacMartin and the rest. And some parents enter into the proceedings, too—and a plain clothes man, by way of running down the stolen band instruments. All these are importantly impersonated by Hope Landin, Fred Clarke and the numerous others named in the small-type paragraph preceding these hurried midnight ruminations.

George Abbott's direction of "What a Life" is as seemingly swift as ever and the single setting of the principal's office offers a perfect background for as utterly devastating a comedy as has come along to a Washington stage in a month of Sundays. A month of Sundays, it might be pointed out, is a pretty long time, as the crow flies.

Chinese Artists Offer Unique Entertainment

'Evening in Cathay' Presents Cultural Group In Diverse Program

Asiatic pageantry, a traditionalized but highly vital dramatic technique, the oddly stimulating phrasing of Chinese music—all blended to make "An Evening in Cathay" a session of enchantment for the partly American, partly Chinese audience that packed Pythian Temple to the doors last night.

Those who harbored any thought that Chinese drama might be difficult to understand, were agreeably disappointed. The conventions of Cathay's drama may be 1,000 years old, but they are eloquent both in furious action and the lighter shades of comedy. Subtle modern touches were discernible, naturally, since the Chinese Cultural Theater Group represents young China, but were always in harmony and completely racial.

China's ancient theater had full sway in the combat scene of "Flying Tiger Mountain" and the delicate moods of "Lady Precious Stream," both tremendously conventionalized but brilliant as Oriental embroideries. Every gesture and pose revealed that sense of winglike motion that pervades Chinese painting.

Comedy, both broad and light, appeared in the dance of the jovial theater god, Ja Kwan, which opened the performance, and a wicked skit, "The Drunken Queen." Theme of this latter involved the queen's annoyance at hearing of the emperor's visit to a favorite concubine. Seeking nepenthe in rice wine (or whatever Chinese queens drink) she gets "lit" as a movie sign, causes no end of worry to an anxious eunuch.

Hung-Ping Kwan Stars

Star of "An Evening in Cathay," in so far as there can be a star in such a well-balanced group, is Hung-Ping Kwan, noted for years as Peiping's premier actor. His clarity and grace of gesture, perfect tempo, reveal the great actor. As for versatility, Hung-Ping Kwan is equally skillful and inspired as the obese and rollicking theater god, the tigerishly active warrior and the eunuch bothered by his lady's alcoholic frolics. Virginia Chang, "most beautiful girl in Shanghai," plays the intoxicated queen with shimmering malice and charm. Averil Tong imparts a tenuous sweetness to "Lady Precious Stream."

The orchestra numbers and instrumental solos had a flavor of the magical. Chinese drama involves the remembrance of Chinese painting, but Chinese music becomes more understandable if you recall the cool and liquid simplicity of Chinese poetry. The instruments are so simple—the bamboo flute, the two-stringed violins and guitar. But those orchestral numbers descriptive of moonrise over a river and the full moon on high, convey the shudder of moonlight on water, of white lunar radiance. Very beautiful, too, was "Temple Meditation," a flute solo by Yue-tuh Sung.

156 Ways To Lose Your Bet

Coast 'Experts' Busy Doping out $100,000 Classic

By John Guenther.

Los Angeles, Feb. 13.—The native experts are casually ignoring the disillusioning but proven theory that there are 156 accredited ways in which a given horse may lose a given race.

An unprecedented majority of turf writers are conceding Seabiscuit first place in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. With a depressing lack of originality, three-fourths of them consider the chunky offspring of Hard Tack a shoo-in unless the track is muddy.

At present they are attempting to determine which horses will run second and third. The three most highly regarded nominees are Kayak II, Sorteado and Ligaroti. All three were imported from South America. Two of them, Kayak and Sorteado, are stablemates of Seabiscuit and carry the red and white of Charles S. Howard. Ligaroti may be regarded as one of the family, too. He is owned jointly by Bing Crosby and Howard's son, Lin.

These are the three selected from the 107 nominated last December 1. Today the field has been reduced to about 30 possible starters, and only some 18 of these will line up at the gate on March 4. Stagehand, The Chief, Sceneshifter, Pasteurized and War Magic did not come West. Bourbon King, Star Shadow, Don Mike, Olimpo, Vino Puro, Beti-Bat, Brooklyn and Amor Brujo have shown little or nothing. Dauber, O'Grady, Grand Manitou, Mr. Blaze and Perhaps, Whichcee, have either trained poorly or broken down. Two score more were nominated for no particular reason and may be dismissed.

List of Starters

Barring further accidents, a list of probable starters should include Seabiscuit, 134; Sorteado, 124; Ligaroti, 122; Marcia, 121; Main Man, 117; Heelfly, 117; Thanksgiving, 118; Cravat, 120; Kayak II, 110; Jacol.., 119; War Minstrel, 112; Specify, 115; Gosum, 110; Quick Devil, 109; Honey Cloud, 112; No Dice, 106; Ossabaw, 116, and Indian Broom, 112.

Slightly doubtful, but still in, are Flying Lee, 106; Marynell, 102; Flying Scot, 110; Esposa, 118; Perifox, 112; Sir Raleigh, 114; Sun Egret, 112; Today, 112; Count Arthur, 114 and Sweepaloat and several others who are not counted on for anything but will simply take their owners' colors around the track for prestige.

This list does not include 3-year-olds. There will be no line on the youngsters. All featherweighted, until after the Santa Anita Derby on Washington's Birthday. Most likely starters are Porter's Mite, Time Alone, Yale o' Nine, Xalapa Clown and Impound, winner of Saturday's San Vicente Handicap. Whether there is another Stagehand in that lot remains to be seen.

Kayak II Best Liked

Returning to the three second-place choices one finds Kayak II the best liked. This one comes in with a virtual feather of 110 pounds against Seabiscuit's top package, and has looked so good numerous railbirds think he could defeat the Biscuit if the stable would permit it. A Congreve colt bought by Howard as a yearling for $7,500, Kayak is a descendant of the Rock Sand male line, which gave America Time Supply, High Quest, Faireno and others. The colt has won so easily in his only starts the experts can't determine how fast he is. He ran a mile in 1:36, just a fifth of a second off the track mark.

Sorteado won the Triple Crown of the Argentine and is a proved router. He cost Howard $40,000, yet ran last in his debut recently. But the debut was a sprint and Sorteado was accustomed to a barrier instead of a starting gate, a clockwise rather than counter-clockwise direction, and grass rather than dirt footing. Over a distance of ground Sorteado is the dark horse of the three. His 124 pounds is second high.

Crosby still is uncertain if Ligaroti can stand a mile and a quarter, the handicap distance. The Binglin Stable hope is an outstanding horse at one and one-sixteenth miles or even one and one-eighth miles. He has won four stakes and ran Seabiscuit almost to a dead heat in a match race at those distances. If stretched out, his endurance is questionable. At 122 he has a 12-pound concession from the Biscuit.

Ed Linke Is Sent To San Antonio Club

St. Louis, Feb. 13 (AP).—Outright release of Ed Linke veteran right-handed pitcher, to San Antonio of the Texas League, was announced tonight by Bill De Witt, general manager of the St. Louis Browns. Linke came to the Browns from Washington in 1937 on a deal involving Elon Hogsett, and was used in relief roles chiefly.

Title Bout Planned

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP).—Authoritative sources said tonight articles for a light-heavyweight title bout here between John Henry Lewis, of Pittsburgh, the champion, and Dave Clark, Detroit Negro, would be signed here Wednesday, with the bout taking place at Olympia Stadium on March 24.

Woodruff to Run

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 13.—The strong University of Pittsburgh track team, led by John Woodruff, Olympic and national collegiate middle distance champion, will meet Indiana University here May 13 in a dual track meet. Indiana will go to Pittsburgh in 1940 for a return meet.

Eastern College Basket Ball Conference Disbands

Action Comes After Year's Deliberation

'Geographical and Schedule Problems' Given as Reason for Loop's Decision

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 13.—The seven-year-old Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball Conference, one of the best in the Nation, will disband at the end of this season.

The conference directors and representatives of the member teams—Temple, Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech, Georgetown, Penn State and West Virginia—unanimously agreed to terminate the league at a meeting here tonight.

"The conference has been confronted by a geographical problem, one that made the arranging of schedules a difficult assignment," said H. Gabriel Murphy, director of athletics at Georgetown University and president of the conference.

Another Problem

"In order to stay within regulations concerning the number of days permitted athletic teams to be absent from classes, the member teams have been unable to schedule games with several traditional foes.

"Another problem involved in the drafting of the schedules is the difference in time of the midyear semester examinations of the member colleges . . ."

Murphy said disbandment of the conference has been under advisement for more than a year. Other officials said the recent resignation of Pittsburgh, effective next year, "may have hastened the move."

"While the directors were unwilling to disband," said Murphy, "it was felt that no other course was open."

"The fact all member teams will meet each other at least once during the 1939-40 season clearly proves unanimity."

Present at the meeting, in addition to Murphy, were Neil Fleming, of Penn State; Clarence Overend and Max Hannum, of Carnegie Tech; Earl R. Yeomans, of Temple; Roy Hawley, of West Virginia, and James Hagan, of Pitt.

Loop Formed in 1932

The conference was formed in 1932 at Philadelphia when representatives of Pittsburgh, Temple, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Georgetown met. Play was started in 1933. The following season Bucknell was added, but after a season's play dropped out. Penn State was voted into the loop in March, 1935, and began conference competition in 1936.

Pittsburgh won the championship three years in succession, 1933, 1934 and 1935, but Carnegie Tech ended the Panther domination in 1936 by turning back Pitt in a playoff game. The Pitt quintet returned to the top rung in 1937 by defeating Temple in a play-off clash, with Temple gaining its first championship last season.

Novak and Hogan Star in 44-to-33 Victory, Team's Seventeenth in Row

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Paced by lanky Mike Novak, towering center, and George Hogan, each of whom chalked up 13 points, Loyola University continued its brilliant winning streak tonight by defeating George Washington University, of Washington, D. C., 44-33, in a thrill-drenched game. It was the home team's seventeenth consecutive victory.

Hogan sent a field goal swishing through the cords almost immediately after the initial tip-off and the Chicagoans never were headed. They lead by 9-1 and 13-6 counts before pulling up at intermission on the long end of a 24-12 score. Faris and Garber, who accounted for 12 and 11 points, respectively, kept the Colonials being completely outdistanced in the first half, but their herculean efforts were not enough to stem Loyola's second-half spurt.

Kautz and Wenskus pumped in a few field goals at the outset of the second half to give Loyola's attack fresh impetus, and George Washington was hopelessly beaten before the period was half over. Midway in the stanza George Washington rallied briefly as Borden flipped in a brace of two-pointers, but Loyola not only checked this scoring spree, but continued to add to its own tally.

D. C. Amateur Boxers Ready For Richmond

Washington's 16 Golden Gloves champions, cream of amateur ringmen, yesterday finished the more strenuous part of their preparations for tomorrow night's intercity bouts with Richmond, which will be staged at Turner's Arena for the benefit of the President's Birthday Fund.

Sponsors of the bouts hope to realize at least $1,000 on the bouts, which will be contributed to the fund for the fight against infantile paralysis. The Arena has been donated by Joe Turner, along with the services of his office force. The only item deducted from the receipts will be actual expenses involved in bringing Richmond's team here for the match.

The Virginians boast well balanced teams in both the Golden Gloves and novice ranks. Five bouts are scheduled between novices, and a full program of eight bouts will be offered in the senior class. Two heavyweight bouts are scheduled, one of which will feature Jimmy DeChard, promising young District puncher, against Cowboy Jones in the senior encounter. Chester Morris, of Washington, engages Billy Eubank in the novice class.

Richmond's senior team will be comprised of Keller Scott, Malvern Seitz, Elwood Harris, Wesley Sprouse, Billy Ballard, Chris Manning, Bill Harris and Cowboy Jones.

A Pretty Rooting Section Loses a Decision

Terrier Pup Wins Ribbon At N. Y. Show

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Lady Retlaw, 11-month-old fox terrier pup owned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Armstrong, of Rockford, Ill., scored a major sensation today in the sixty-third annual Westminster Kennel Club show at Madison Square Garden as she was judged the best wire-hair over some of the largest fields in the entry list of 3,070.

The victory gave Lady Retlaw, which will be a year old on Saturday, the right to go into this evening's competition for best of breed against the outstanding smooth fox terrier, still to be selected.

Another major triumph turned in by a "rookie" in dog show circles was that of Old English, 21-month-old bulldog owned by Stephen D. Bryce, jr., of Port Chester, N. Y., which went best of breed. The all-brown bull defeated seven national champions and immediately took rank as one of the top candidates for winner of the nonsporting group.

Among Old English's victims was Champion Peter Alaunt, owned by Mrs. George W. Perry, of East Weymouth, Mass., which was best of breed in 1938.

From the kennels of Edith B. Tranter, of Fort Thomas, Ky., came the best English cocker spaniel, Champion Holmbush Rustle given first place for open bitches. She went on to be crowned winner and best of winners, bitches, and then defeated Lanehead Giltedge of Giralda, owned by Giralda Farms, of Madison, N. J., for best of breed.

Johnnies Beat Bethesda for Ninth Straight

Frank Cady's Basket In Closing Seconds Wins Game, 28-26

Continuing its policy of winning the "close ones," St. John's Basketball Team annexed its fourteenth victory in 15 games this season yesterday, 28-26, in a wild game with Bethesda-Chevy Chase at the Johnnie's gym. Six times during the last half the score was tied up, and throughout the game the lead changed hands seven times.

Frank Cady, the husky forward, who has been one of the Johnnie's mainstays this season, scored the winning basket with a scant 55 seconds remaining, the only points he scored in the game. Leading up to the Garrison finish, however, was a half hour of the most exciting cage warfare the Johnnies have gone through this season.

The Cadets occupied the first two periods in solving Bethesda's strong zone defense. They trailed, 8-6, at the first quarter, 14-12 at the half, but by the end of the third quarter they were deadlocked, 20-20, with the suburbanites.

Dick Hollis took a 22-20 lead for Bethesda, but Joe Gallagher tied it up. With three minutes of the game remaining, Johnny Shumate knotted the count at 26-26, and Cady dropped his game-winning pivot shot slightly more than two minutes later.

It was Martin Hunt, Johnnie center, who kept the team in the running early in the game, working in the middle of the Bethesda defense, directly under the goal. His 11 points took scoring honors, and Shumate, of the losers, was second with 7.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 13.—Pittsburgh's Oakland district seems likely to be the graveyard for the championship hopes of Georgetown University in this the seventh and final season of the Eastern Basketball Conference.

Tonight in the stadium pavilion Pitt's puzzling Panthers snapped out of the lethargy which resulted in two league defeats last week and nosed out the Hoyas, 43-41, in a sensational battle to duplicate an early-season setback handed the Capital City club by Carnegie Tech on the Skibo hardwood. Those two demerits are the only ones in the Georgetown conference record to date.

Max Hannum, coach of the Tartans, was in the stands rooting for the Panthers as the unexpected result bolstered his team's position at the top of the circuit. At the start of the game they were deadlocked with the Hoyas and would have surrendered the top rung in event of a Pitt defeat.

Melvin (Red) Port, sophomore star from Carrick, who has been handicapped by a cold and loss of weight, was shoved into action as a substitute for Bob Johnson, guard, with six minutes of the ball game remaining and the floor fates selected the sorrel-top to pitch in the deciding points.

The invaders were thundering down the home stretch, closing a gap which once had widened to 10 points. They finally trailed by only three markers at 41-38 in favor of Pitt, when Port received a pass from a teammate in mid-court and suddenly discovered nary an enemy player on the righthand side of the net. He dribbled in swiftly but surely and holed out for what proved Pitt's final markers and winning ones.

That fielder swayed a box score which balanced almost perfectly otherwise. Both sides made seven foul goals, but Port's two-ply fling boosted the Pitt total of field buckets to 18, as against 17 for the losers.

Merle Thorpe Near Top in Fla. Golf

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 13.—Merle Thorp, of Washington, editor of Nation's Business magazine, finished among the leaders at the end of the first round of the 72-hole medal play handicap golf tournament of the Artists and Writers Golf Association at the Palm Beach Country Club today. He had a gross of 90, a handicap of 17 strokes for a net return of 73.

F. Newlin Prince, of New York, led the field with 83—15—68.

Modern Pitchers Lend an Ear And Learn About Real Hurling

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—If any modern pitcher thinks he works hard, let him bend an ear to this tale of a man who once was 13 runs behind—and won his game five hours later.

It's the story of 89-year-old Charles (Chick) Fulmer, one of America's pioneer ball players.

The gray-haired Fulmer, whose hardy exploits helped make baseball history of 50 and 60 years ago, broke into the major leagues back in 1869 by pitching the Philadelphia Athletics to a 51-49 victory over the Brooklyn Atlantics.

"I started at 2 o'clock in the afternoon," said Fulmer, "and pitched the whole game, finishing about 7.

"I was a pretty good pitcher, but the Atlantics scored 13 runs off me in the first inning. The Athletics got 14 runs and four homers in our turn, and we won."

The veteran of the diamonds, who managed the old Cincinnati Red Stockings and reorganized the Philadelphia Athletics in 1873, played his first ball game only a few years after the present national sport made its appearance in Philadelphia.

"They had a team called the Logans," said Fulmer.

"The Logans were made up of butchers and played late Saturday afternoons after the marketing was finished and on Sundays."

During his long baseball career, Fulmer helped organize the American Association in the winter of 1881, played with the Philadelphia Keystones, the Forest Citys of Cleveland, Rockland, Ill.; New York Mutuals, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cincinnati, and ended in 1885 at Portland, Me.

Like Abraham Lincoln, Fulmer was born February 12.

"I used to tell the baseball players the flags were out for me," he chuckles, "and some of them were dumb enough to believe it."

Roadwork and Beauty Treatments Put a Bloom in Show Poodle's Cheeks

Blakeen Eiger, hero of this strip, starts his day on with a brisk morning run, accompanied by his handler, Norman McBrien. Purpose of the workout is to prepare for the Madison Square Garden Dog Show beginning on February 13 in New York. Eiger will be one of the favorites to cop "best in show" honors, over a field of more than 3,000 canine champions.

No prima donna ever needed more careful attention before an opening than a poodle before a dog show. Here, Blakeen Eiger gets the hair on his aristocratic hind legs trimmed by Handler Norman McBrien. Such treatment in the past has earned 18 best-of-breed, 13 nonsporting-group, and 4 best-in-show championships for the poodle whose daddy was the Madison Square champion in 1935.

Wide World Photos.

After his rigorous duties earlier in the day, Champ Eiger has a minute off to admire himself in the mirror. That coat of his wouldn't be quite so white except for a liberal dusting of powder. This poodle will represent only one breed among 96 expected to participate in Garden Dog Show.

Short Distance, With Meade Up, Wins Feature at Hialeah

'Comeback Kid' Scores 60th Victory

Gives Ray Racer a Smart Ride to Beat Out Pretty Pet And Her Reigh

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 13.—Mrs. Nat Ray's consistent filly, Short Distance, aided by one of Don Meade's well-judged rides, came to the rescue of groggy favorite players by scoring his fourth straight victory in the Abraham Lincoln Purse here this afternoon.

The combination, paying $3.90 for two, gave form followers their first success in nine straight races and their second in the last 24 events decided. Fourteen choices lost prior to Trina's score in Saturday's fifth race, and Short Distance was the first successful favorite since that occasion.

Short Distance, running the mile and a furlong in 1:50 3-5 without being extended, led M. Leon's Pretty Pet past the wire by three lengths, while W. Maloney's Her Reigh lost the place by another three lengths. Our Willie was fourth and Landlubber last.

Meade's Sixtieth Victory

The largest week-day crowd of the meeting, estimated at 12,000, filled the stands. They saw Don Meade score his second triumph of the day on Short Distance. It was his sixtieth of the year. Meade is far clear of the nation's riders to date.

In tight quarters between Her Reigh and Pretty Pet leaving the gate, Short Distance had the foot to break through and take a clear lead swinging into the first turn. Meade then took snug hold of his mount and sat still in the saddle thereafter. Pretty Pet aways offered what contention there was. Her Reigh held a narrow margin over Our Willie throughout the stretch.

Meade Wins Opener

Meade had the leg up on Victor Emanuel's Blue Covert in the 3-furlong test for maiden 2-year-old fillies that ushered in the program. The daughter of John P. Grier, a 4-to-1 chance, outran 13 rivals and drove past the wire a length and a half in advance of Maebelle. The latter, lightly backed, forced the running and had three lengths to spare over Dewy Dawn for the place. Acquin, the choice, raced greenly. She never was a vital factor in the running. Blue Covert finished in 0:34 3-5.

—For the second straight time, Ken's Mom failed in the role of favorite when she had to be satisfied with fourth money in the second dash. This was easy for Sure Miss, a $14.70-for-$2 shot. The filly came from a position close off the early pace to assume command in the stretch and register by five lengths. Giboir closed a big gap to account for the place, a head in advance of Colonial Maid, which was another head before Ken's Mom.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE COVERT, $10.10, $5.70, $5.10; MAEBRILLE, $9.80, $6.40; DEWY DAWN, $10.90.

BLUE COVERT broke cleanly, was hustled to the front and maintanied her lead thereafter under strong pressure. MAEBRILLE, a keen contender all the way, made a game effort, but could not improve her position. DEWY DAWN fought her way through the field at the furlong pole and outlasted MIRA PEG. The latter broke well and went forwardly on the inside the entire trip. ACQUIN broke well, but swerved out the opening furlong and then bolted to the inside apprcaching the furlong pole.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:39. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's b. f. (3), by Swift and Sure—Barefoot. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:46, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $14.70, $7.50, $6.50; GIBOIR, $21.40, $15.90; COLONIAL MAID, $26.20.

SURE MISS, prominent contender in the early running, stole through on the inside entering the stretch, shook off the leaders after a mild drive, but was in hand at the finish. GIBOUR, hard urged from the start, bettered his position on the outside in the last 3 furlongs and closed stronsly on the outside. COLONIAL MAID, well up from the start, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted KEN'S MOM. The latter, used up racing OKLAB into defeat, faltered in the final furlong.

Daily Double, Blue Covert and Sure Miss, paid $93.10.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:10½. Winner, J. Whyte's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY INFINITE, $11.90, $5.30, $3.50; FOGOSO, $5.10, $3.60; KNOWING, $3.40.

LADY INFINITE, a forward contender, gradually improved her position when placed to pressure, assumed command with a rush at the furlong pole and held away the remainder of the trip under light pressure. FOGOSO worked his way up steadily and, saving ground into the stretch, closed stoutly and disposed of the others. KNOWING displayed his usual burst of early speed, but then faltered in the final drive. STRUT broke well, but was outrun in the first half mile. She finished fast through the stretch on the outside.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 4:02½. Winner, A. E. Silver's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SARGAZO, $22.20, $11.80, $8.10; GHOST TRAIN, $17.00, $8.70; GREAT HASTE, $7.30.

SRAGAZO, going in his best form, went prominently throughout. He assumed command on the stretch turn, but then drifted out and lost ground, but continued with determination and outlasted GHOST TRAIN. The latter outbroke the field, displayed the form he showed while racing around and held on tenaciously when the final test came. GREAT HASTE, vigorously ridden, improved his position gradually and finished with a belated rush between the leaders. PERFECT PEACE, always in the thick of contention, faltered in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,100. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:12½. Winner, Mrs. C. Lyon's dk. b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOHN'S HEIR, $16.20, $7.00, $5.20; TIMEFUL, $7.50, $6.10; SHOHOLA, $7.80.

JOHN'S HEIR, energetically urged and going close up all the way, came through on the inside entering the stretch, responded courageously in the final test and outlasted his opposition. TIMEFUL, outrun early, worked his way up gradually on the outside, finished fast on the outside and would have won in a few more strides. SHOHOLA forced a strong SPEEDY BOOGER into defeat, responded to a hustled command on the stretch turn, but then bore out and lost ground. He came again and made a game bid, but faltered in the final drive. OVERSIGHT, hard ridden, raced evenly throughout. SPEEDY BOOGER stopped badly in the last quarter mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200. The Abraham Lincoln. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:44. Winner, Mrs. N. Ray's b. f. (4), by St. James—Nearby. Trained by N. Ray. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:12, 1:38 1-5, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHORT DISTANCE, $3.90, $2.80, $2.20; PRETTY PET, $3.30, $2.50; HER REIGH, $2.80.

SHORT DISTANCE, hustled to the front, opened up a good lead rounding the first turn. He was then rated until midway around the lower turn, where he again drew out and held sway to the end under brisk pressure. PRETTY PET, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, made a bold effort leaving the backstretch, but could never reach the winner. HER REIGH kept well up all the way, held on gamely when placed to a drive and outstayed OUR WILLIE. The latter, outrun early, saved ground turning into the stretch, but could not get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:15½. Winner, Medway Stable's blk. m. (6), by Pass II—Dewey Eve. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:51 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASSING EVE, $15.50, $7.00, $4.30; GLASBY, $10.10, $6.00; QUICKER, $4.90.

PASSING EVE, under light restraint until leaving the backstretch, gained steadily when placed to pressure and, responding courageously under punishment in the final drive, outlasted GLASBY. The latter, outrun early, bettered his position gradually on the outside after leaving the backstretch, made a game effort, but then hung in the last 50 yards. QUICKER, vigorously urged to get to the front, showed the most speed and shook off SUN MICA repeatedly, but faltered when the real test came. SUN MICA, in near pursuit of the leader throughout, faltered after entering the stretch and did not bear out as in the previous start.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:49. Winner, R. Green's b. h. (5), by Prince Pal—Anne. Trained by F. Clear. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:43 1-5, 2:05 4-5, 2:33 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALAN, $11.50, $6.20, $3.70; GUILD, $6.00, $4.00; GOLDFIN, $4.50.

PALAN, going closer up than usual, moved around the field with a rush after leaving the backstretch, closed gamely through the stretch and outlasted GUILD in the final drive. GUILD forced a steady pace and raced SCHLEY NURSE into defeat, took command while saving ground entering the stretch, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. GOLDFIN, under light restraint until rounding the lower turn, closed gamely to pressure and was easily the best of the others. OUR TEDDY went well up and had no excuses.

Hialeah Park, Feb. 13.

Dear Al:

The Marvel Ratings kept up their pace of "one high-priced winner a day" when they turned in Sargazo, at a $22.20 mutuel, today. In fact, Sargazo was the highest rating number of the program. I clicked with winners but the Marvels again took down the longshot honors. Clocker Mike is giving me up to concentrate on the ratings. He was a hard man to get along with today when Lady Orchid, carrying his 10 and 10, ran absolutely last. Tomorrow he's going to put his hopes in the numbers and place $5 across the board on Velociter in the eighth race. At least, being in the day's final, he will have the whole afternoon to worry about this one.

I understand that "Whip-Saw Art" Brown, the big Rise and Shine Man of WOL, is going to leave tomorrow morning on a tour of some of the winter tracks. He's going to New Orleans, then to Hialeah and will fly over to Havana. I'll bet the last named move depends upon cashing a bet at the Miami track. It is reported that Mrs. Brown, who is a much better handicapper than "Whip-Saw," has taken charge of the family bankroll and will "book" his 10-cent wagers. But she can't stop him from dreaming. He will parley them frontwards, backwards and sideways in mind bets. He always feels good after these mind bets, win or lose. If he wins, he tells himself how good he is. If he loses he feels as if he is winner because, if had played money, he would have lost. If by any chance Art gets his hands on the family bankroll at the track, he may have to stop on the way home and give piano lessons—town to town.

There is a rumor that the Browns are leaving town to get away from the Bennings selections. At any rate, I'll keep him from making that crack when he makes his last prevacation broadcast tomorrow morning. BILL.

First race—Maenerva, despite an assignment of 120 pounds, gets my call in the day's opening dash for juveniles. This one will have Earl Steffen in the saddle and he's better than a greenhorn with a young horse. Questre, with Arcaro up, has worked well and may be prominent. Quenemo for the show end.

Second race—Huskie Queen has been close on occasions and may get out of the maiden ranks in this field. She appears to be best and all we need is a good ride from Nash. Fairy Vale could awake in this company. Cream Cheese, with Meade aboard, may go well.

Third race—The seven furlongs of this seems to suit Bellum and I'm going to string along with this fast closer. Donoso will be in the saddle and he is a capable boy. Learned is good now and looms as the one for the top fellow to beat. Worthing for the minor award.

Fourth race—Tall Story seems the best of the 3-year-olds gathered for this event. Gets a nice figure and has too much speed for these, I do believe. My Porter for the place. Egress is a bit highly placed but could take it all.

Fifth race—Roll and Toss, with Arcaro to do the riding, gets my call in this field. Gets in with moderate weight of 113 pounds and should favor the long route. Get Off is preparing for the Flamingo Stakes and may show well in this event. Technician had some excuse last out and is dangerous.

Sixth race—I'm going to take the Starmount entry of Shambles and Hezdrel in this field of maidens. Both have shown speed on occasions. Coronado has had many chances and may be second again. Fairy Dale has disappointed often but could awake.

Eighth race—Big Victory is tossed in this with a 100-pound feather and should take down the chief money. Black Gift has a little class and should be prominent. Balapin.

Best bet—Tall Story.

Waxwing Wins At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, La., Feb. 13 (AP).—R. A. Coward's Waxwing, under top weight of 111 pounds, scored a decisive victory in the top claiming sixth race at the Fair Grounds today.

The logical choice at $3.60 in the mutuels, the brown horse moved to a three-length lead at the quarter-mile mark in the mile and 70-yard route. He was followed in the early pace by Tunbridge and Masterpiece.

The 6-year-old son of Ariel was never threatened seriously at any stage of the journey, withstanding the challenges of E. Drillon's Chance Sweet in the stretch and winning over the latter by two lengths. O. L. Foster's Casinghead was third.

Henry Armstrong in Exhibit Here Tonight

Dusky Triple Champion Opposes 4

Banks, Howie, Chris Norfolk Confronted By Hank's Left In Arena Bouts

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Henry Armstrong, the dusky warrior whose feat of holding three world championships simultaneously will go down in ring annals as the greatest of all time, headlines tonight's bill of fighting at Turner's Arena, where he will box a four-round exhibition against as many opponents.

Undefeated in his last 41 bouts, 37 of which ended with his opponent sprawled senseless on the resin-flecked canvas, Armstrong will give District fans a second peek at his peculiar style of brawling, which is as unique as his record. The fact that one opponent has been selected for each round he'll box is eloquent tribute to the sepia socker's punching power, and Armstrong has faithfully promised to put them all to sleep for the customer's benefit.

Billy Banks, Kid Howie, Kid Norfolk and Kid Chris, all colored boys, are the targets to be set up before Armstrong's lethal blows. Banks and Howie are from this city, and Banks at one time was considered a promising young pugilist. If any of the four go the distance—the full round, tonight, it will be the taffy-tinged youngster, for he is the fastest of the group, and speed will be essential in getting away from Armstrong's round-house blows.

Armstrong performed in Baltimore last night and tonight's workout is supposed to be the last of a lengthy exhibition tour. From here, according to his advance agent, the triple-titleholder will fly to Havana to complete preparations for a championship bout with Bobby Pacho. His welterweight crown will be at stake this time.

Tonight's workout is guaranteed to be better than the first Henry appeared in in this city. Fans still remember his one-round knockout over Johnny Cabello at Griffith Stadium two summers ago, which lasted just long enough for Armstrong to get across the ring and rap Cabello a couple of times on his chinaware chin. That exhibition lasted less than a minute and the fans departed mumbling in their beards. Some said Armstrong belted him out with a right hook, others claimed he kicked him; more said he hit him with the water bucket, and there were even some who contend Cabello was swept off his feet by the breeze Armstrong's punches generated, and hit his head on a board.

Armstrong swings like a gent trying to warm his chill bones of a cold morning. He strides in like a bull—not Ferdinand, and is an extraordinarily easy target for a good jab. If Banks keeps his left out and stays off his bicycle he'll go the full three minutes, but if he stops to change records he'd better pull the covers up tight, because he's going to sleep. As for the others, if they aren't out of there before a minute elapses Armstrong is slipping.

To appease the audience's appetite for a bit of official slugging, the matchmaker has arranged a quartet of bouts to fit underneath the exhibition, and in this respect the names of Tommy Ricco and Vincent Dell-Orto lead all the rest. They'll travel eight rounds. Another eight-rounder brings together Charley Gilley, of Baltimore, and Toby Tobias, transplanted Miamian.

Six-rounders have been arranged between Frankie Wills and Augie Flowers; Irish Joe Perry and Woody Buchanan. The first bell will be tapped at 8:30 o'clock.

Champ Here Tonight

Britons Seek Armstrong in Title Fight

Meade Is Planning Invasion if Terms For Bout Are Right

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Having cleaned up the opposition in this country, Henry Armstrong probably will go to England this summer to defend his world welterweight championship.

Armstrong, who also holds the lightweight title, will lay his 147-pound crown on the line twice next month and then, if the terms are right, will go abroad.

Big Eddie Meade, manager of the rugged Los Angeles Negro, said today that he was mapping out for Henry a busy summer campaign which includes numerous defenses of the two titles.

Meade explained that an international shell game is in progress now and that he and Armstrong will be the heavy winners in the event of trip to England.

Three London promoters are dickering for Henry to meet the winner of the March 15 fight between Jake Kilrain, European welterweight champion, and Ernie Roderick, of England. Armstrong would appear in England during Derby Week—May 22-27.

Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, who is in this country, has offered Meade a flat guarantee of $45,000 and the privilege of 40 per cent of the gate, if that cut is more than $45,000, for a battle at White City Stadium, which holds 100,000 spectators.

Syd Hulls, another promoter, has bid for the fight and offered to match any offer. The third bidder is Capt. Harding of the National Sporting Club.

$50,000 Guarantee

"With three of them in there pitching," said Meade, "we'll probably end up with a $50,000 guarantee and a 40 per cent cut of the gate if it's higher."

While Meade is handling the business, Armstrong is on the road raking in plenty of greenbacks. He was in Baltimore today to lay a wreath on the grave of Joe Gans and fight an exhibition tonight. Henry fights another exhibition tomorrow night in Washington and on February 17 in West Palm Beach.

Saturday, Henry will go to Havana to begin training for a welterweight title defense on March 5 against Bobby Pacho, Mexican veteran. His next defense is to be in mid-March against Frankie Wallace either in Detroit, Cleveland or St. Louis. Meade said Cleveland probably would get the bid for that one because Wallace is a product of that city.

Half-Mile Relay FeaturesMd.Games

A half-mile relay for Mason-Dixon Conference teams last night was announced as a feature of the annual University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment invitational games scheduled at Baltimore March 11.

Conducted as a straight 880-yard run in 1937, the race last year was converted into a sprint medley at the request of competing teams. The former test, however, appears to be the most attractive and suitable for all concerned.

At least a half dozen entries are expected for this year's race, including Catholic University, which won both last year and the year before. Randolph-Macon, runner-up in 1937, probably will enter, along with Washington College, third in 1937 and second last year, and Western Maryland, which captured third place last winter.

Jack Hader Is Signed For Bout With Wright

Jack Hader, burly baker boy formerly of Kansas who has decided to take up his permanent abode in this city, last night was added to the program being arranged for Thursday night's wrestling show at the Arena. Mr. Hader, whose best scowl is two sizes larger and fiercer than that of any other artist to work here recently, will have it out with Jim Wright, the lanky but unlucky Texan. It will be a 30-minute time-limit bout. And, lest we forget, the Golden Terror and Bibber McCoy are billed in the feature role.

Alfaro Brothers Win West Point Awards

West Point, Feb. 13.—Eloy E. Alfaro and Jamie Alfaro, of the Military Academy's 1939 graduating class and sons of the Ecuadorean Ambassador, have been honored by the West Point Athletic Association for their performance with the soccer team. Eloy was awarded a minor sports "A and I" gold star for having played in more than 50 per cent of the games and on a winning team against Navy. Jamie was awarded a monogram for playing in at least 50 per cent of the matches.

Hoya Hockey Squad Faces Loyola Here

First Intercollegiate Match Tonight at Chevy Chase Palace

A fast-moving aggregation of ice hockey players are slated to take the ice tonight at 8:30 p. m. in the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, when the Loyola University of Baltimore meets Georgetown University Hockey Club. Tonight's fray will be the first intercollegiate ice game ever to take place in the Nation's Capitol and also will mark the first contest between the two schools.

Last week the Hoyas lost their curtain raiser to the Baltimore All-Stars, 6 to 1. Hoya preparations have been going on dilligently for the past week. Coach Hoyle has been schooling his charges in coordination and team play, and says this game will see a different Hoya team in action. A new set of plays have been worked out and some of the rough edges have been smoothed out.

Art Feenan, Hoya goalie, has been especially apt in picking up the finer points of the game. Johnny Smtih and Jim Graham also will be expected to star tonight. Smith scored the only Hoya goal last week on a sensational dash down the ice. He has the distinction of being the first Georgetown man to score in a hockey game.

The Loyola team has an experienced line of fast, rugged skaters. With Jack McLaughlin at center and Emmet Queen and Frank Brown on the wings, no coach could ask for a better attack. This trio was selected on the All-Maryland Scholastic team while playing for their high schools. McLaughlin is not only captain of the Loyola team but also the leading scorer. Although he weighs but 155 pounds, the youngster is a fast, rough player with five years' experience on five different hockey teams in the Monumental City.

Strangely enough the fastest skater on the squad is 230-pound Bishop Baker, right defense for the Marylanders. The former Calvert Hall gridder is a fast-moving, hard-charging defense man. His replacement is a mere 6 foot 2 weighing 220 pounds, Vic McConnaghy by name. Ralph Costa, former Northwestern footballer and 175-pound intercollegiate wrestling champ, is paired with Baker on the defense and is noted for his rough play without pads.

Tonight's battle will get under way at 8:30 o'clock, with tickets going on sale at 7 p. m. and the doors opening at 8:15.

Yanks Sign Keller, Former Terp Star

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 13.—The world champion Yankees reached out into the vast resources of their farm system tonight and plucked three of the brightest stars to twinkle on minor league diamonds last season in the persons of Charley Keller, Newark outfielder, Wal Judnich, Marvin Bruer, outfielder and pitcher, respectively, of Kansas City.

Terms of the contracts signed by the rookies were not divulged, but Keller was reported to have received $7,000, one of the largest sums ever paid a Yankee freshman. But the 22-year-old lad who first sprung into prominence at the University of Maryland, comes up to the big time with one of the best reputations ever acquired by a minor leaguer.

Short, and of stocky build, Keller led the International in batting last season with a .365 mark, and in 1937 with an average of .353. A southpaw at the plate, the neighboring rightfield barrier at Yankee Stadium may be an easy mark for his thunderous clubbing, although the Marylander also bangs out a lot of sizzling line drives. In college Keller batted over the .500 mark consistently, and got his share of homeruns although an absence of fences, which permitted opposing outfielders to play unusually "deep," made it unusually hard to connect for a round-trip.

Breuer, a right-hander with a good "hopper" and better than average curve, was the mainstay of the pennant-winning Kansas City mound staff last season. He chalked up three victories in the final round of the American Association playoffs.

Judnich, despite an anemic batting mark of .273 last year, generally is considered as good a prospect, if not a better one than Keller. There appears to be small chance of his sticking with the Yankees this year, what with DiMaggio, Henrich, Selkirk, Gallagher and Powell on the roster, but observers believe he will come back next year and stay up for a long time.

Two Tie for Medal In Golf Club Tourney

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Bobby Dunkelberger, French amateur champion from High Point, N. C., and William Stark and John Z. Fletcher, both of Jacksonville, today tied with 71 each for medal honors in the 18-hole qualifying round of the Twelfth Annual National Tournament of Golf Club champions.

They were the only players to break par.

Mako and Tidball Take Double Title

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Top-seeded Gene Mako and Jack Tidball, a Los Angeles pair, today defeated Gardnar Mulloy and Charles Mattman, both of Miami, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2, to win the Everglades Club Invitation Doubles tennis title.

Elden Auker Owes His Mound Success to a Football Injury

Fractured Shoulder Caused Him to Deliver An Underhand Ball; He Explains His Style

By the Associated Press.

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 13.—Elden Auker, the Boston Red Sox's new pitcher, figures the luckiest break of his career was a college football injury which makes him throw a baseball with an underhand delivery.

Looking over the list of major league hurlers with sore arms, the tall right-hander was inclined today to be thankful for his unusual style.

"I believe I throw with less strain than nearly any pitcher in the league," he declared. "When you think about it, it's a lot more natural to throw underhand than overhand. If you don't believe it, just watch a kid when he gets his first ball. He uses an underhand swing."

Changed Delivery

In his sophomore year at Kansas State College, Auker received a fractured shoulder in football practice. The shoulder was hurt two of three times afterward and he found he could not throw overhand as he had done while pitching for the freshman and semipro teams.

He switched to a side-arm delivery which served well through college. But when Auker joined the Decatur club of the Three-Eye League after graduation, Bob Coleman, the manager and a scout for Detroit, told him to use the submarine ball.

Auker, here for three weeks of golf before spring training starts, is glad Detroit traded him this winter to Boston.

"In the first place," he said, "those Red Sox led the league in hitting last year and they've just about got the power to match the Yankees man for man. In the second place, I won't have to pitch to Roger Cramer.

"That Cramer is one of the hardest men in baseball to get out. It seemed like every time I faced him as a Tiger he spent the afternoon on the bases. I'm glad to get on his side."

Boys Club Tank Meet Entries To Close Soon

The deadline for entries in the city-wide Junior Swimming Championships, to be staged Saturday at the Southeast Branch of the Boys Club of Washington, has been definitely set for Thursday. No entries will be accepted after that date, it was announced by Charles Reynolds, Boys Club director.

The swim meet will be the first of its kind to be sponsored by the Boys Club, and a record entry has been assured. Local junior and senior high schools have been invited to participate, as well as Tall Timbers Camp for Boys, Jewish Community Center, Kenwood Country Club, Community Center Department and other boys' organizations throughout the city.

There will be four age classes for boys of 11, 13, 15 and 17 years. Qualifying time trials will start Saturday at 2 p. m. and the finals at 7 p. m. Events will be held over various distances in the backstroke, breastroke, freestyle and crawl stroke, and team relays will wind up each class competition. Spectators will be welcomed, and no admission charged.

Brewers Bow In Two Extra Periods, 46-42

Jewels Overtake Locals Pros With 30 Seconds to Go

In the wildest and roughest American basketball league contest of the season New York's aggressive Jewels last night scored over Heurich Brewers in the second period of an overtime game at Heurich gymnasium, 46 to 42.

Bolstered by big Ed Kweller, 6-foot-6-inch center, who rejoined Brewers just before the game, Heurich appeared a certain winner in the first overtime period while in possession of a 38-to-35 lead with only 30 seconds to go.

John Pelkington made it 38-36 with a free shot and George Slott, scoring star of the evening with 18 points, cashed a one-hand shot from sidecourt in the final eight seconds to tie the count at 38-all.

Tony Valvano, a rookie substituted for the veteran Rip Gerson in the second extra period, provided the winning punch. With the score tied at 41-all as the result of a pretty shot from long range by Wilson, Valvano made good on a follow-up shot to send the Jewels ahead 43-41. Goldfadden cashed a foul toss, but a free conversion by Slott and another shot from scrimmage by Valvary settled the issue.

The Jewels were leading at the end of the first period, 11 to 8, and had assumed a 20-18 command at the end of the second period.

Capt. Arthur Zahn experienced his hottest scoring hand of the season, looping in seven field goals and three fouls for a 17-point total. Whitey Wilson, aggressive Heurich forward, played a great floor game and four ringing field shots.

In Heurich Amateur Basketball League preliminaries St. Martin's won over District of Columbia Firemen 34 to 21, and Kit Carson's Hour Glass scored over United Clay Production, 32-23.

Ed Stephenson Sets Record With 163 Game

Hangs Up Season's Mark in Federal League; King Stars

The second high individual game of the season, in the Federal League 163, and a tie for second highest set, 421, were rolled by Ed Stephenson, General Accounting Office bowler. Government Printing Office had high team game, 600, and team set, 1,707.

Navy Department—Men

King, of Naval Air Station, earned individual high game, 155, and helped his team to team game honors, 535. Larimore, of Commandants had high set, 358, and Secretaries combined for a 1,661 team set.

Petroleum League

Wayne Oil Burners, leading the league, were led by Jack Ghilaigi to a clean sweep of their three games with Colonial Fuel Oil. Ghilaigi had 157 pins for high game, and 400 for high set. Standard, Logan and Lehman won three-game victories over Ott's Service, Chapman and Esso, respectively.

Procurement League

The Norman team, with Carl Solomon paving the way, took all individual and team honors as it swept a series with the Aztecs and found itself in first place. Solomon rolled high game, 148, and high set, 393, and the team combined to take team game, 575, and team set, 1,662. Tutors helped out the Norman cause by taking the odd game from the league-leading Ionics.

Graphic League

John McIntyre's 142 was the high individual game, and Frank Mischou's 368 was best for individual set. Judd & Dettweiler rolled a high game of 582, and Progressive Printers captured team set honors with 1,658.

A. & P. League

League-leading Condors dropped the odd game to Self Service, allowing Office to come within two games of a deadlock for the lead. Office had previously been in third place, but it came up a notch when it swept three from Sparkle.

Kilowatt League

Sub-Station, leaders of the league, still held a slim lead after an odd-game loss to Testers. Ed Meredith's 362 set paced the Testers. George Jones had high game of 152.

S. Railway Clerks

Pinky Gardner, of Freight Traffic, scored high game, 128, and hign set, 362. B. of R. C. turned in high team game, 560, and Short Lines had the highest team set, 1,636.

Silver Spring

Grotto Grill knocked the Silver Spring Dyers and Cleaners from the league lead by taking three games as Frank Spates rolled a 396 set, second highest score of the year. Colesville Service Station captured three from Sanford's as Doc Hobbs led with a 396 set. Williams Heating won two from the Electricians as Charlie Humphries showed the way with a 355 set.

Chevy Chase Commercial

Chamber of Commerce

Bob Sullivan stole the spotlight with a 142 game and 351 set, while the Wildcats paced the teams with their 565 game and 1,553 set.

Capitol Garage

H. A. Lamberton took game honors with 125, and L. Seller turned in high set with 338. Tan's 525 game and 1,515 were the best team scores.

Jewelers League

Honors were evenly divided with R. Robinson chalking up high individual game, 146, and Paul Schlosser high set, 372. Blustein Wholesale No. 2, bowled a 563 game, and Veidt & Son turned in a 1,500 set.

Lynn Sweepstakes

The Margaret Lynn Sweepstakes, which attracted 236 entries last year and promised to exceed that mark by a handsome margin, have been postponed from February 18 to 22, it was announced last night. The five-game test will be staged at Arcadia.

Philadelphia Wins U. S. Squash Title

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—Donald Strachan, of Philadelphia, won the national singles squash championship today by defeating Stanley Galowin, New York, 15-8 and 15-11.

Strachan held the national title in 1935 and is the present Pennsylvania State titleholder.

Another Dodger Makes a Speech

Lippy Durocher Isn't Thinking So Highly of Giants

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 13 (AP).—Lippy Leo Durocher, the Brooklyn Dodgers' new manager, contends there are plenty of "if's" in the National League this year and they're not all on his ball club.

"Bill Terry has the National League pennant all sacked up for hi New York Giants," the talkative one asserted, "and he has more ifs among his players than any other team in the outfit.

"Brooklyn has improved its club 100 per cent since Burleigh Grimes went to spring training last year. Burleigh did a lot of it and has left me with the greatest team the Dodgers have had since 1934, when I was with the Cardinals.

"Larry MacPhail (business manager) is a hustler and he's not going to sit behind a losing ball team. He's going after material and Brooklyn is going to have a great team yet."

LEO DUROCHER

Durocher, here to supervise ten days of preseason training for his pitchers, catchers and others needing early work, didn't shy away from the subject of Van Lingle Mungo's contract when broached on the matter.

"I think the Brooklyn team has done a lot for Mungo during the two years he's had trouble with his arm," Leo said. "On the other hand, I think Mungo can still do a lot more for the Dodgers.

"I hope he and MacPhail reach an agreement because I want him pitching for me this year."

Tony Lazzeri, former Yankee, who came to the Dodgers after a season as coach and utility with the Cubs, has informed Durocher he intends to play second base this year.

"Pete Coscarart (second baseman) is a great ball player," Durocher stated, "and if Tony can get the job away from him it's his."

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, Feb. 13.—It may be very unbecoming and immodest for anyone to display results and murmuring something to the effect that "I told you so," but so often, when guesses go wrong, the critical public sticks out its tongue and points a derisive finger at the mistake that I can't help tooting a few blasts on my personal trumpet these days.

VIDMER.

Along about the first of the year, for instance, I had the temerity to predict a bright and shining future in the tennis world for Wayne Sabin. In fact I suggested that he might be the player to succeed Donald Budge as the amateur champion. At the time Wayne Sabin was not considered a very distinguished young man, having had many setbacks last season.

Consequently it gives me a great deal of pleasure and a measure of satisfaction to point out the fact that young Mr. Sabin has been cleaning up the winter tournaments in the Southland, and, if I am not mistaken, so far is unbeaten this year. He has won at least five tournaments and taken Gene Mako, Davis Cup player and runner-up to Budge at Forest Hills last year, every time they have met, which is, I believe, four.

Then a little later I suggested that Sammy Byrd, the former big league baseball player, was coming along as a golfer after devoting his entire attention to the game for a couple of campaigns, and that he was likely to be heard from in the near future.

And with that in mind, I find it very satisfactory indeed to discover that he finished second in the Texas open last week, turning in a magnificent 273 for the 36-hole test and beating, among others, such prominent performers as Byron Nelson, Jimmy Thomson, Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Lawson Little, Henry Picard, Ralph Guldahl, Gene Sarazen and Frank Walsh.

Such little things as these make life far more pleasant and the mail less vindictive for those of us who sometimes are tempted to masquerade as experts, but there is even greater satisfaction for this observer in the way the tennis series between Donald Budge and Ellsworth Vines is going.

This extra elation is due to the receipt of a couple of very audacious letters shortly after the first meeting of Budge and Vines at Madison Square Garden. After viewing that performance I departed convinced that Budge was

Insurance Man Hits Testimony In Trust Probe

Denies Many Agents Forged Names of Policy-Holders

Vincent Saccardi, manager of the Washington office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., demanded yesterday that Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission retract a statement that ballot-tampering by company agents was a widespread practice in the biennial election of directors.

He charged that a "high pressure group" representing the Congress of Industrial Organizations was responsible for testimony before the President's monopoly committee last week by 11 company agents that names of policyholders were forged, to ballots.

"Mr. Douglas unquestionably knew this," he said. "Under the circumstances, I insist that he should retract his statement before the committee that ballot-tampering is a widespread practice.

200 Agents in D. C.

"We have 200 agents here in Washington. If given the opportunity we can bring them before the committee and let it ascertain whether they know of any such practice. It is non-existent here, and we are ready to prove it.

"The testimony is a pure case of subterfuge on the part of a labor union to use the SEC to further its own ends. The purpose is to attempt to discredit the company, its management and its agents."

SEC officials said Douglas had no comment to make in reply to the insurance official's demand. They said he had not intended to intimate that every agent engaged in the practice, but that it was employed to a sufficient extent to make the election of directors "a mere formality."

Tries to Organize Agents

The United Office and Professional Workers Union, a C. I. O. organization, is undertaking to organize insurance agents, and is making a special drive among agents of Metropolitan Life.

Testimony that names of policyholders had been forged caused a flood of telegrams and letters to pour into the office of the monopoly committee. Members said that, although a great many protests and denials had been received, some of the messages confirmed the testimony.

Motors Gain In Trading on London Mart

Transactions in U. S. Issues Are Limited By Holiday Closing

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 13.—Motors gained in the London stock exchange today under the leadership of Rolls Royce and Austin Motors, but the entire session was decidedly a trader's market. Dealings were small, with the big interests holding off pending developments in the international situation.

British government bonds and investment securities, including foreign obligations, held steady throughout the day. Transatlantic stocks reflected the improvement in Wall Street in early dealings, but the Lincoln's Birthday holiday in the United States checked any form of expansion.

Prices drooped somewhat as the day's trade drew to an end, although motors were joined in their gain by iron, steel and aircraft. Gold mines and oil shares slipped on South Africa and Paris selling. Rubber shares were quiet and uncertain pending the international regulation committee's decision on quotas, expected Tuesday. Prices at the close were uneven, compared with Friday's close.

The sole feature of a quiet foreign exchange market was a series of offerings in the afternoon of Dutch guilders, weakening the price to 8.74 to the pound sterling, compared with Saturday's quotation of 8.71¼.

About £531,000 ($2,490,390) gold was sold at 148 shillings, 4½ pence an ounce, a decline of ½ penny from the Saturday quotation.

Wheat Prices Hold Steady At Winnipeg

Canadian Exports, Which Were 400,000 Bu., An Aid to Market

By the Associated Press.

Winnipeg, Feb. 13.—A firm Liverpool market and an export business in Canadian wheat at around 400,000 bushels gave wheat future prices a steady trend at Winnipeg today. Prices moved narrowly and at the close were ⅛ cent higher to unchanged; May at 62⅛, July 62¾ and October 63⅛.

Trading was quiet throughout, and apart from minor support by exporters and overseas interests, together with a few purchases by mills, little interest was shown.

Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d higher on a moderate mill inquiry and higher shippers offers. The English market was held in check by purchase of a cargo of Argentine wheat afloat for the United Kingdom. Buenos Aires continued at unchanged quotations while United States markets were holidaying. Country marketing totaled 111,000 bushels Saturday against 102,000 bushels for the same day a year ago. Pit trade in coarse grain brought out a little barley buying credited to exporters.

Cotton Futures Rally Briskly At New Orleans

New Orleans, Feb. 13 (AP).—Cotton futures rallied strongly following slight early declines here today under increased covering by shorts and trade buying. The close was steady at net gains of 7 to 10 points.

The holiday in other American markets and a lack of incentives to trade held prices within an extremely narrow range in pre-midsession dealings.

Lieut. George Darnell of the Homicide Squad charged Dr. Warren with performing the operation. The inquest will be held today at 11:30 a. m. at the District Morgue.

Real Estate Management Course Is Inaugurated

Opening Session Held at Wardman Park; 45% of Fees Come From Management; Government Has Large Stake in Situation

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Importance of sound real estate management was emphasized yesterday by E. L. Ostendorf, Cleveland, president, National Association of Real Estate, at the opening session of a course in management of unfurnished apartment properties being conducted this week at Wardman Park Hotel by the Institute of Real Estate Management, specialized division of the National association.

Management of real estate, the speaker said, is an increasingly important problem, not only from the standpoint of the owner of real property, but from that of the millions of tenants who pay from 15 to 40 per cent of their gross earnings for rent. It is true from the standpoint of the mortgagees who finance the Nation's housing, he reminded, and from that of the Government, not only because management affects the taxable value of real estate, but because the Government is confronted with a tremendous management problem in the handling of numerous real estate holdings it is acquiring through the operation of certain New Deal agencies.

Management is acquiring increasing importance in the real estate vocation, he said, because it is rapidly becoming the most lucrative branch of that business, adding that a recent survey conducted by the United States Census of Business revealed that 45 per cent of the income of real estate firms in this country comes from fees for managing real estate property.

Government's Interest

The Federal Government, he explained, now owns some 130,000 repossessed homes and has a stake of nearly half a billion dollars in real estate requiring management. It has before it the management of housing projects for low income groups involving a capital expenditure that will undoubtedly exceed a billion dollars, and it is difficult to appreciate fully the vast social and economic importance of this specialized business service which is rapidly becoming one of the most important problems in our Government.

Forty-nine insurance companies now own some $2,000,000,000 worth of real estate, he cited, and they are realizing the importance to them and their policyholders of competent and reliable real estate management in conserving the value of their huge property holdings. This, he argued, is a great challenge to the emerging profession of real estate management. With people giving more and more attention to the great problem of rehabilitating blighted areas throughout the country, another great field is presented where the services of thoroughly trained and competent property managers are essential.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, he continued, recognizes that there is definite need at this time to define sound management and to put the management of property on such a basis that those who require the services of property managers may easily recognize and reward competency, integrity and efficiency. It was for this reason that the association created the Institute of Real Estate Management, organized as a professional body to set up and disseminate the very best ideals for management of real estate, identify competent and reliable managers and, above all, establish standards of efficiency.

Banking Notes

President M. F. Calnan, of Liberty National Bank, has entered his third year as chief executive of that institution, being elected to the presidency in February, 1936, succeeding the late Rolfe E. Bolling. Next July Mr. Calnan will have been associated with the bank 20 years, having entered its employ July 9, 1919, following service in the World War. Six months later he became an assistant cashier and on May 25, 1922, was elected cashier. On April 3, 1931, he became vice president.

Booklets entitled "Banking Made Plain" have been placed in the lobby of National Metropolitan Bank for use of its patrons and others. The booklet is replete with general information on modern banking transactions, covering all services which a bank offers and explaining how banking is conducted.

How patrons should handle their accounts, what they should do for their own protection and the many ways a bank may be of aid are subjects dealt with. A list of "don'ts" to save trouble is carried. Importance of proper signatures, correct addresses and monthly checking of statements are also cited.

Honor for Marsh

National recognition for his personal production record last month has been won by J. D. Marsh, Washington general agent of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., according to word received here yesterday from the home office in Fort Wayne, Ind. Mr. Marsh was named among the company's national leaders in number of applications written in January.

The New York Stock Exchange, Curb Exchange, Cotton Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade and most principal security and commodity markets throughout the country were closed yesterday in observance of a Lincoln's Birthday holiday.

Remaining open, however, were the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, the Chicago and New York livestock markets, Savannah Naval Stores and Buenos Aires flaxseed. All European and Canadian markets were open.

Bank Stocks Dip, Surety Issues Up During Past Week

New York, Feb. 13.—New York City bank stocks eased off slightly during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, specialists in bank and insurance stocks. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on February 10 was $1,357,190,000, compared with $1,359,698,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $2,508,000, or 0.18 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market continued to improve during the past week, with small gains being registered at the close. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on February 10 was $585,833,000, compared with $583,872,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $1,961,000, or 0.34 per cent.

William T. Miller, Labor Department Employe, Dies at 51

William Talmage Miller, 51, retired Department of Labor employe, died yesterday morning in his sleep at his home at 816 Silver Spring avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Death apparently was caused by a heart attack. He had attended services at the Woodside M. E. Church the previous night and appeared to be in good health.

During the World War he was on the editorial staff of The Stars and Stripes in Paris.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Irma Carroll Miller; a daughter, Lida Carroll Miller and a stepmother, Mrs. William P. Miller, all of Silver Spring.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring, at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Ten Billion Subsidy Cited For Highways

Engineers Report in Special Study for Am. Railroad Ass'n.

That highway transport in the United States has been subsidized to the extent of more than ten billion dollars by those who pay taxes on homes, farms and other property, is the conclusion reached by three of America's most eminent and experienced highway engineers, in a special study for the Association of American Railroads made public yesterday by John J. Pelley, president of the association.

For public carrier trucks of three-ton capacity and up, the subsidy ranges from $876 to $2,047 a year, according to the report of Clifford Older C. B. Breed and W. S. Downs, the engineers making the study.

Mr. Older, as chief of the Illinois Highway Department, had charge of the famous Bates Road Tests in which the fundamentals of present-day highway design were developed. Prof. Breed is head of the School of Civil Engineering of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Prof. Downs is professor of highway engineering at the University of West Virginia.

In their study the three engineers considered the system of streets and roads as a great State public utility, of which every road open for traffic is part. "Each road and street in this public highway system of a State receives or delivers most of its traffic to or from some other highway," the engineers said. The State system as a whole, they said, is not unlike a railroad system" in that the main trunk highways are dependent for their traffic upon the use of city streets and secondary rural roads as terminals and feeders.

Improvement Costs

The cost of improvements on this system made for the use of motor vehicles, in the view of the three engineers, should be met by "an equitable charge upon the motor vehicles which use them, just as the costs of telephones, electric power, water and gas, railroads and other public utilities are met by those who use their services."

That this cost has not been met by highway transport is their conclusion, after an examination of the period 1921-1932, for which complete data are available, with close approximations for later years. During the 12 years ending in 1932, the study finds that highway users failed by almost $10,000,000,000 to pay fully for the facilities provided for their use. For the one year 1932 the deficiency amounted to $682,000,000, a subsidy which was not diminished for the succeeding years up to and including 1937, according to the report.

Additional costs incurred in building roads thicker, stronger, wider, straighter and flatter than would be needed for vehicles of this class, and additional maintenance costs incurred because of the operation of heavier and larger vehicles, should be met by the classes of vehicles whose operation makes necessary these added costs, in the view of the engineers.

Higher Subsidies

From complete figures for the year 1932, they find that the subsidy for heavier vehicles ranges from $876 a year for a three-ton truck or a 20-passenger bus up to $2,000 a year for the heaviest permissible truck. Complete figures are not available for later years, the engineers report, but fair approximations for the year 1037 show similar results.

"The report of Messrs. Older, Breed and Downs," Mr. Pelley said in making it public, "does not apply in detail to any particular State. It does show the highway picture as a whole, however, and demonstrates beyond any doubt that highway transport is being substantially subsidized by those who pay taxes on homes, farms and property in general."

NLRB Orders Shipbuilders to Deal With CIO

'Bethlehem Plans' Called A Subterfuge to Evade Collective Bargaining

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board, declaring that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation dominated the plan of employes representation at its Boston and Fore River, Mass., plants, ordered the company yesterday to withdraw recognition from the plan.

Coupled with the order was a ruling that the corporation should cease discouraging membership in and, upon request, should bargain with the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (C. I. O.) at its Boston plant.

The board also ordered an election among the production, maintenance and stockroom employes at Fore River, at a date to be announced, to determine whether they desire to be represented by the C. I. O. union.

The board said:

"The plans at Fore River and Boston are but counterparts of the 'Bethlehem Plan,' created in 1918 to meet contemporary exigiencies. The concept of industrial relations, epitomized by the 'Bethlehem Plan,' was the outgrowth of, and a relatively progressive departure from, the industrial ideology of an era when suppression of labor's organizational activity and of concerted employe action was the prevalent method of eliminating industrial unrest . . .

"The plan evolved as a method whereby the semblance of collective bargaining was vouchsafed employes without relinquishment of the ultimate control of the bargaining agency by the management."

The board's reference to the "Bethlehem plan" was of added interest because it now has before it, a trial examiner's recommendation that it order discontinuance of employe

Custer Faces Former Mates In Game Today

Former Western Star In Eastern Line-up Against Raiders

In the first interhigh basketball game he has been scholastically eligible for, Bob Custer, the slender forward who transferred from Western to Eastern several weeks ago, comes face to face with his old court comrades today. Eastern, which owns a first-place tie with Wilson, meets the Red Raiders on the Eastern floor in the feature half of a double-header starting at 3:30 p. m.

Custer had nothing to do with Eastern's high place in the standings, but his becoming eligible will doubtless help the Tide's chances in the championship playoff next week-end. He was named on several All-High selections last year, and has performed well in Eastern's outside games to date.

Custer or no Custer, Western will be out to win today's game, a loss definitely ending its chances to get in the title tournament. For several seasons the Eastern-Western clash has been the most interesting of the schoolboy engagements, with first one and then the other favored. But today, various odds from 2-1 to 5-1 will be offered on the White Tide and there will probably be no takers.

The other half of the double-header, the first game, features Anacostia's final attempt to win a ball game in its first season in the cage series. Roosevelt is the foe. Here again the odds heavily favor one of the teams, Roosevelt. If the Riders win, and every indication points to that possibility, they will have a cinch on third place in the standings. The game is the last for Roosevelt and Anacostia in the regular series.

Woodrow Wilson, deadlocked for first place with Eastern, prepares for the two games it must play in the series, entertaining the American University frosh on the President court. The frosh trimmed Wilson in an earlier start, and today's game will be a chance to even matters.

Skating Title Annexed by C. Leighton

By the Associated Press.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Showing the form that won him a place on the 1940 American Olympic team, Charles Leighton, of Minneapolis, today lifted the North American speed skating crown from the head of Chicago's Vic Ronchetti.

It was a big day for Midwestern skaters as Maddy Horn, of Beaver Dam, Wis., the National women's champion, walked off with the senior women's title. Janet Milne, defending titleholder failed to score a single point.

Leighton piled up a grand total of 110 points, taking firsts in the 440 and the 5-mile, second in the three-quarter and 220, and third in the half mile.

Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, another Olympic skater, took runnerup honors with 80 points, which included victories in the mile and half mile.

Tied for third place at 40 points each were Ronchetti, Kenny Bartholomew, of Minneapolis, the National champion, and Eddie Schroeder, of Chicago.

Schroeder failed to compete in last day's program, which was moved here from nearby Saranac Lake.

Three new records were established on the final day of the event, all registered by junior and intermediate competitors.

Fourteen-year-old Geraldine Neuhfer, of Cleveland, who bettered the junior girls' 220 and 440 national records in the first two days of the championship, broke the world's mark for the half mile today by skating the distance in 1:32.8. The previous record was 1.33.9.

Arthur Van Dyke, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., set a new national mark in the junior half-mile event with a time of 1:23.4, the former record being 1:24 flat.

A new world's mark also was claimed for Joe McDonald, of Saginaw, Mich., in the intermediate half-mile, officials said his time of 1:16 clipped 2 seconds off the previous mark.

Gridmen Skate

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 13.—Seized by the thrills of the recent Michigan-Minnesota hockey series here, University of Michigan football coaches have issued a challenge to their gridiron stars for a battle on skates.

Earl Martineau is in charge of recruiting a team from members of the varsity coaching staff while Forest Evashevski will organize his football teammates.

the master and said so in the following manner:

"It seemed to me that all arguments were settled Budge not only won, but he won in a fashion so convincing that, at least, to me, no doubts remained as to who is the world's greatest tennis player today . . . There will be nights during the coming tour when Vines will play inspired tennis, surpassing his normally excellent game, and there will be nights Budge will miss the lines and nip the net with his backhand shots. On those nights Vines will win, but over the course of 70 matches, Budge should win a large majority."

This estimate of the relative ability of the two foremost players in the world brought forth, as I say, two audacious letters; audacious because they derided my estimate before the results were in, which is contrary to the general practice of scoffing letter writers.

C. U. Ringmen Happy, Others Sort of Sad

Columbus Loses Two Regulars and Maryland Chagrined

The District's three collegiate ring teams went back to work yesterday, but the only light-hearted group was Eddie LaFond's Catholic University mittenmen, who chalked up a 7-1 victory over V. P. I. last Saturday night.

Columbus, with Dave Schlaiffer and Jimmy Wills, on the sidelines nursing injuries sustained in the Kentucky match, looked forward to Friday's bouts with Tennessee with misgivings. Maryland, held to a tie by North Carolina, was downcast and no little disgusted. The Terps weren't at their best, it seems, but where too confident for their own good.

Interest at Catholic University this week centers around Joe Bunsa's bout with Don Traylor, North Carolina State's ace 155-pounder, for if Joe wins this one LaFond has promised to send him to the intercollegiate championship tournament. Bunsa won from Jimmy Woolwine last week, after losing to Frank Cronin, of Maryland, the week before. He won his bout in the Temple match, returning to the ring after a year's absence because of a serious injury sustained in football. All trace of the injury has disappeared, and the improvement he displayed in his last two bouts has almost assured him of a trip to the nationals.

At Columbus, Schlaiffer, whose badly gashed eye required eight stitches, may be replaced by Bert Parod, a veteran, or Max Coe, an up and coming freshman. Ernie Silva, who made a winning debut against DeSales College two weeks ago, probably will pinch-hit for Willis, who took two stitches in a cut over his eye. Tennessee recently held The Citadel to a 4-4 draw, and Coach Jim McNamara is afraid the Southerners may be too strong for his crippled team.

Rumors of a shift in Maryland's line-up for the Rutgers match were circulated around the campus yesterday, with Bob Lodge reportedly slated to take over the 175-pound job, replacing Morton Steinbach who may move up to the heavyweight berth. There may be several other unannounced changes in the team's appearance by Saturday, for it is no secret that Coach Heine Miller was no little disturbed by his men's lackadaisical attitude in the Tarheel match.

Junior Soccer League Opens This Afternoon

Dick Tennyson's Playground Department junior soccer league gets under way this afternoon, with four games scheduled at as many playgrounds, the complete card being: Sherwood vs. Rosedale, at Sherwood; Raymond vs. Park View, at McMillan; Gallinger vs. Hobver, at Hoover, and Virginia Avenue vs. Taft-Burroughs, at Rosedale.

In additidn to these eight, it is expected that Hamilton and Takoma will also enter the league before it is far advanced, both these playgrounds having several groups of experienced youngsters, and all ten teams have entered the Washington division of the national junior cup competition, for which a separate drawing will be made.

The league is being played in two divisions, section one consisting of Park View, Raymond, Sherwood, and Rosedale, the others being in section two, the section winners coming together for the league title. To conform with national junior cup rules, the age limit this season confines participation to boys who have not reached their eighteenth birthday, which is one year less than in former years.

All league games are scheduled to start at 3:45 and will consist of two 30-minute halves.

In the Washington Private Schools league, two games are scheduled this week, St. Albans meeting Landon tomorrow at St. Albans, and Friends playing Georgetown Prep at Friend's on Thursday. Georgetown Prep is the league baby, this being its first season, but the Blue and Gray put up a great fight against St. Albans last week before losing 1-0. Later in the week St. Albans defeated a strong Severn team 2-1, after extra time.

Wildcats Win

Davis, W. Va., Feb. 13.—The Davis High Wildcats had trouble getting started, but exploded a 15-point barrage in the final period to defeat Peidmont High, 44-29.

Columbia University Graduates Praised at Luncheon

The part Columbia University graduates have played in the history of Washington Cathedral was praised yesterday at a luncheon of the alumni association at the University Club. The praise came from Maj. Edwin N. Lewis, executive secretary of the National Cathedral Association. Above (left to right) are Joseph W. Burns, attorney with the Department of Justice; Col. Lester G. Wilson, alumni president here, and William Roy Vallance, legal adviser with the State Department, three who attended the luncheon.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Glenn S. Mentzer, plaintiff, vs. Beatrice M. Mentzer, defendant. Civil Action No. 723. The object of this suit is to get an absolute divorce from the defendant, Beatrice M. Mentzer, on the grounds of voluntary separation from bed and board for five consecutive years without cohabitation. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 30th day of January, 1939, ordered that the defendant, Beatrice M. Mentzer, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JOHN O. BOWEN, Assistant Clerk. 31,7,14

WILLIAM E. RICHARDSON, Attorney.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re: DISSOLUTION OF MONTGOMERY BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION, a corporation. Equity No. 66434. FINAL NOTICE OF FILING CLAIMS.

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to the order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, dated February 3, 1939, that all claimants who have not heretofore filed their claims with Julius I. Peyser, receiver of the Montgomery Building and Loan Association, are required to file the same with said receiver on or before the 6th day of March, 1939, and that all claimants failing to file claims in accordance with the notices heretofore given in the notice hereby given, shall be bound by all of the orders, proceedings and judgment in said case and by all proceedings which may have occurred prior to their appearance, by filing claims or otherwise, in said case, but the failure to file claims shall not prevent the allowance and payment of their pro rata share of whatever sum the receiver, subject to the direction of the court, may find to be due them according to the records of said building association.

Blank forms for the filing of claims by creditors, depositors, stockholders and certificate holders, and instructions for preparing the same, may be obtained at the office of the undersigned receiver.

JULIUS I. PEYSER, Receiver of Montgomery Building and Loan Association, 1039 Investment Building, Fifteenth and K streets northwest, Washington, D. C. 7,14

Large national manufacturer with retail stores will employ 2 young men over 23, neat appearance. Good reference. Positions permanent and good opportunity for advancement. Previous experience not necessary. SALARY and commission during training period. Apply to Mr. Saylor, 724 11th st. nw., 9:30 to 10 a. m.

CAN YOU SELL
If you can, here is an opportunity for an aggressive young man in an organization that is growing beyond the capacity of its present personnel. To the man that can qualify this is a chance to grow with us. You must be over 21 years of age, be neat appearing and have some sales experience. You will be paid a salary and commission and you will be advanced as you develop. Apply Mr. Baker, 4th floor, 1337 E st. nw., between 10 and 12, or write Box 274, Washington Post.

Here's Why Ebie Is Back Home Now

WIRE-HAIRED terrier; lost last Sunday night, Georgetown; white, brown ears, heavy coat. Name "Ebie." 3417 N st. nw. MI. 2905. Reward.

A dog can stray from home but he won't stay missing long, once a Post "Lost and Found" goes after him. Wynant Johnston, of 3417 N street northwest, lost his wire-haired terrier. The above ad in The Post located the person who found the dog. When you lose anything, don't say "lost"—say

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A contributor complains that the privilege of reviewing the bidding is so frequently abused, resulting in needless delay and annoyance to the other players, that to amend the laws, scrapping the privilege entirely, would be an asset to the game.

F. F. writes: "Probably I would be termed a crank should I offer objection during the course of a friendly game to the habit of players of requesting a review of the bidding.

"It seems to me the privilege is being abused to the point where it has become a nuisance."

There is much to consider in F. F.'s argument. You can depend upon it, when a player constantly asks for a review his mind is not on the game. His thoughts are wandering elsewhere.

Here are the present international laws on the subject:

"During the auction a player may ask to have previous calls restated only when it is his turn to call.

"Before the opening lead has been duly made a player may ask to have previous calls restated. Subsequently a player may ask only what the contract is and whether, but not by whom, it was doubled or redoubled."

Pity the poor player who asks for a review of the bidding of today's hand. He would find himself hated bridge player No. 1 if he was not ostracized or ignored entirely.

Eight rounds of the most peculiar bidding took place, during which East let loose a hail of psychics and the opponents doubled at every opportunity, while East's partner grew increasingly apprehensive and uncomfortable. By the process of elimination, alone, it seems, East finally wiggled into a good declaration and a winning contract. West sighed heavily in relief, but the adversaries, still visualizing a profitable set, fell into the trap and doubled.

Here is the way the contributor, H. H. G., describes it:

"I submit for your amusement rather than your approval a hand played by myself in a duplicate game. The ridiculous eight rounds of bidding actually occurred. I was sitting East and decided to have some fun at the expense of our opponents to the consternation of my partner.

"The reward for all this foolishness (which I probably didn't deserve) was a doubled game for a top on the board. I made the hand easily when North obligingly covered the club ten with the jack. I lost a club and a spade.

"I have made a few notes to try to explain a few of the bids:

"(1) A rescue redouble, asking my partner for his best suit.

"(2) Repeating the psychic and swallowing hard.

"(3) Redouble again for take-out.

"(4) Poor partner again bids his hearts and swears inwardly at me.

"(5) South falls in the trap and doubles.

"I assure you this sort of bidding is not a constant practice with me."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE fate of hundreds of marine hospital employes who one way or another entered the service as attendants, advanced in duties, at least, to higher positions, and now are confronted with uncertainty of employment because of the June 24 executive orders that blanket the attendant jobs into civil service status, has gained attention from Representative Chester C. Bolton, of the Twenty-second Ohio District.

He is concerned because the situation affects the Cleveland Marine Hospital and 65 employes are threatened with dismissals there.

Writing to E. R. Ballinger, Treasury technical assistant, and J. H. Weiss, assistant chief examiner, Civil Service Commission, Bolton says: "It is not a question of whether this practice is to be corrected but the problem seems to me to be one of summarily dismissing loyal and faithful employes who have been doing their work without complaint. It seems to me that in all fairness there should be some action looking toward giving these employes an opportunity of qualifying by noncompetitive examination . . . As a matter of fact, there is no doubt but what thousands of Government employes are performing duties not actually called for in their appointment papers. In this particular instance there will be no funds saved for the employes involved must be replaced."

The commission, at the moment, is working on the problem. The problem, it was said, is not one of the individuals but of the group of jobs as such.

Little Visits: First reaction in the radio division, office of education, Interior Department, is the enthusiasm of the personnel. The conjecture is that they saw their work grow so fast they felt they were pioneering something. And they were pleased at the response—as many as 12,000 letters (fan mail) came in one week. The division started off early in 1936. Its first program was on March 16, of that year, and was carried over but nine scattered stations. Now it sponsors three programs—"Americans All—Immigrants All," "The World Is Yours," and "Wings of the Martins"—heard over three networks with 265 stations accepting the program. The impressive thing is the tremendous time spent in developing authenticity, accuracy. Sometimes as many as 2,000 man hours go into the creation of one program. "The World Is Yours," which dramatizes Smithsonian exhibits, is a case in point. The theme and content are developed by the division scriptwriters with Dr. Webster True, of the Smithsonian. Then comes the long chore of research, often entailing such detail as the sound of war drums in some African tribe or the color of Mary Todd Lincoln's inaugural gown. The product goes to Laura Vitray, chief script editor; then to William Dow Boutwell, director, radio activities. Approved in all these quarters, the script moves to New York, where all office of education series originate.

Notes: Sound movies, in color, of the lush Hawaiian Islands will be shown at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Departmental Auditorium under National Park Service auspices with Delegates S. W. King, of Hawaii, as the lecturer. It's free to the public. King will discuss some of the historic highlights of the islands and describe the pleasure places. Believing the language interesting to many people, the delegate will explain some words and phrases . . . The head man of the Agriculture Play Writing Contest gives the latest word, as follows: "All it takes is a contest to bring them out from behind the shutters—these budding geniuses who have kicked over the traces, burned their bushels and submitted a round of very professional-looking manuscripts to the contest committee. The scripts have been coming in at a merry rate, running the gamut from stark tragedy to comedy, high and low. And so, in the near future, some creative individual who felt life so intensely that he or she cried out, so to speak, will sit in the Agriculture Auditorium and witness his or her brainchild, with a nod to the next person, 'I wrote that play.'" And may the villain come from behind his beard and get it on the chin!

Bob Burns Says—

Well, sir, I sure started this day out right. I came downstairs to breakfast an' the first thing I did, despite the fact that I could hardly resist that sizzlin' plate of ham an' eggs, was to take the little wife in my arms an' give her a big hug an' kiss an' tell her she was jes' the grandest sweetheart in the world. Boy, I jes' swept her right off her feet with the greatest demonstration of off-screen lovin' that's been seen in Hollywood in years.

"Bob, you derned old fool, what's come over you?" she says, when she can catch her breath.

"Honey, you're jes' the sweetest thing that ever lived!" I says, an' grabs her again.

"What's the matter with you, ain't you done your sittin' up exercises yet?" she says. "You know you don't pay any attention to me till you git some food on your stomach. Why, I usually don't even see you till you git through readin' the mornin' paper!"

"But, darlin'," says I, "today is different! Don't you know what today is?"

"Yes," she says. "But I'm afraid you don't. Today is Tuesday!"

Even that don't squelch me an' I come right back with: "Today, my sweet, is Valentine's Day!"

"Oh!" she says, an' her face gits red. "Well, I'm glad, at least, that you've got a good reason for actin' silly!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Dignity and Dinner Lost

The loser sometimes finds he's winner,
Well satisfied, though lost his dinner. —Old Mother Nature.

Does that saying of Old Mother Nature's sound foolish to you? It isn't. It is quite possible to be a loser and at the same time win more than is lost. It happens over and over again. It happens continually among the children of Old Mother Nature. Many of them know this, in fact, I think most of them do.

Snow King the Polar Bear was hungry. He was extremely hungry. He was not starving, for, depite the fact that he lives in a land where snow and ice prevail for the greater part of the year, it is only occasionally that he reaches the point of starvation. But often he goes without food for a matter of several days. Then he is very hungry, indeed. It was so now as he prepared to slowly, noiselessly, carefully pull himself up out of the sea onto the ice. Only a little way from him Barker the Seal was dozing on the ice, as he deary loves to do. What a feast Barker would make! There is nothing the Polar Bear likes better than he does Seal meat.

"If I can pull myself up on the ice without his knowing it I'm sure I can get him," though Snow King. "I will lie flat and push myself along a little distance at a time without a sound."

As he prepared to pull himself up gently he glanced back over his shoulder. The next instant things happened and they happened fast. Snow King lost that dinner he was so sure of. To that extent he certainly was a loser. But he didn't mind that. He didn't mind it at all. He didn't give it a thought. Not then anyway. All he thought about then was that he was a winner. He had lost a dinner but he had saved his life.

When he had looked over his shoulder he had been just in time to see a black fin tearing through the water straight toward him. Just below the surface of the water was a huge black and white form with the wickedest eyes, and a great mouth and sharp enough to cause even a Polar Bear to shudder. In the drawing of a breath Snow King was out on the ice and scrambling away from the edge. How he did it so quickly he doesn't know to this day. And he was none too soon, not one wee second too soon. Terrible jaws that would have made as short work of Snow King as he would have made of Barker the Seal clashed, just barely missing one hastily withdrawn hindfoot.

Snow King turned to bare his teeth and growled savagely as Orca the Killer Whale, the fiercest of all animals in the sea or on the land, shot away in quest of a meal elsewhere. It had been a narrow escape, for, as the great Bear rules on the ice and shore, so does Orca the Killer rule in the sea, and there is none who does not fear him.

Of course Barker the Seal had vanished. He had been instantly aroused by the noise made by Snow King scrambling out on the ice and had promptly slid into the crack in the ice beside which he had been dozing. He had dived and passing under the ice, had come up outside in the open sea. Fortunately for him Orca was already well on his way. He would have made no more than two bites of Barker had he caught him. Barker would have had no chance at all.

So it was that Snow King lost yet won. He lost a dinner he had been sure of, but he saved his own life and that was worth more to him than any number of dinners ever could be. He wasted no more time there. None knew better than he how useless it would be to stay around there. So, grumbling to himself, he traveled on and miles from that place he did get a dinner, for not all of Barker's relatives were as smart as Barker. And having dined, Snow King found a sheltered place among some hummocks of ice and there went to sleep, wrapped warmly in his great fur coat.

Partial Text Of Hoover's Lincoln Speech

Hits 'Hallucination Spending' of New Deal At N. Y. Banquet

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—A partial text of the address of former President Hoover at the annual Lincoln dinner of the National Republican Club tonight follows:

Every year at this time Americans express gratitude for the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Recently both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Browder have claimed him as a founder of their faiths. I was under the impression he was a Republican . . .

Eighty years ago if an observer could have looked down on this Republic from the high stratosphere he would have seen a nation sadly divided and confused. It was a nation professing liberty yet holding millions of slaves. It was furiously debating property rights, States' rights, decisions of the courts and secession.

But high above all this din and confusion Lincoln heard the supreme chord of all human emotions—the liberty of men . . .

Today if the observer in the high stratosphere were to look down on this Republic he would find a people more sadly divided and confused than at any time since Lincoln's time. He would see the torch of human liberty dimming on every continent.

Finds Nation Confused

He would find the richest and most powerful nation in the world confused by its own inventions; disordered in its economic life; hurt by the weakening of private and public morals; arming from fear of foreign violence; discouraged by vast destitution in a land of plenty; frustrated by failure of age-old panaceas. He would find strange doctrines of class struggle, of personal power, of extravagance, of debt, and of hate . . .

Three months ago this observer might have despaired of us. But today he would see flashes of light. He would find that Americans have by the ballot again spoken their demand that the safeguards of liberty be maintained . . . Those who adhere to the traditional liberalism upon which the Republic was founded and which Lincoln sustained are crowding away from the pseudo-liberalism of the New Deal . . .

Whatever this New Deal system is, it is certain that it did not come from Abraham Lincoln.

The President in his last message on the state of the Union made a moving appeal for unity in the people. But the acerbities of the times were not much allayed when a few days later at the Jackson Day dinner he smote the to-be-purged Democrats with hints to get out of his party. That was more of a mustard plaster than an ointment of unity . . .

Lincoln "Wouldn't Be Fooled"

Mr. Lincoln would not be fooled by the notion that economic righteousness and social good burst upon the world with the New Deal.

He would see that a generation after his time, when big corporations and mass production entered national life, it was the Republican Party that first established the concept that business must be regulated by Government if the freedom of men was to be preserved. Indeed it was the Republican Party that first initiated regulation against monopoly and business abuse in the States. Over the last 50 years it created seven out of the ten great Federal regulating agencies of today. It was Republicans who created the income and estate taxes, that fortunes might not accumulate so as to oppress the Nation and that there might be relief of tax burdens upon the poor.

Abraham Lincoln would have watched anxiously when the growth of humanitarianism began to press upon Government. And he would have seen it was Republican State administrations that first created the limitation of hours for women, that started the abolition of child labor, that initiated workmen's compensation acts, State old-age pensions, mothers' pensions, public health, and a score of other social reforms . . . It was Republicans fighting for morals in Government who established and in every administration strengthened civil service.

Mr. Lincoln would not be fooled that the New Deal first discovered conservation and public works to benefit the people. It was Republicans who first built up every single one of the great Federal policies dealing with these problems. All over this Nation are parks, forests, mineral reservations, irrigation districts, navigable rivers, harbors, great bridges and canals, all the initiative of Republican administrations. The New Deal has added a few per cent to the area or totals. And they have charged them to the next generation.

It was Republicans, following Mr. Lincoln's own platform pledge, who held protection to workers from foreign standards of living by tariffs and sought to hold the home market for farmers against peasant labor abroad.

Lincoln would have seen it was a Republican administration which first announced the responsibility of Government aid in time of great depression. When the Federal Reserve System, admirably aided by Democrats, failed to meet the storm of 1929, it was a Republican administration which again proposed drastic banking reform. It was Republicans who, pending such reforms, created the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Home Loan Banks, the Agricultural Credit Banks and brought the strength of the Government to protect savings and homes and insurance policies of all the people.

Mr. Lincoln would have witnessed a Republican administration in 1930 the first to announce obligation that no American through no fault of his own should go hungry or cold, and first to organize Nation-wide relief for the unemployed. And it organized relief in a fashion which excluded corruption, waste and demoralization of community responsibility . . .

And Mr. Lincoln would observe that all these years it was Republicans who held to the system of free enterprise which, while it had weaknesses, yet produced the highest standard of living known in any nation in the history of the world. . . .

With our reinforced leadership in new Governors and in Congress we are strengthened to these purposes. New vigor and courage have come to us by the rise of youth in our party . . . We may differ among ourselves as to details. We may differ in expression. But we stick together in principle. We are engaged in no purges of honest men.

These many statements of Republican purpose unswervingly demand that moral standards in public and private life he regenerated; that humanitarian action be sanely advanced; that economic productivity be restored; that thrift be re-enthroned as a national virtue; that private enterprise be sustained and regulated to prevent abuse; that personal liberty be safeguarded; that representative government be purified; that peace be maintained . . .

The President has introduced us to the seventh New Deal since 1932. It is also the most expensive one. The new gamble with the fate of a people presents some startling features . . .

I wish here to applaud the President's grasp of one hint from the election. That is the demand that the Congress be independent. The spirit of his acceptance, however, reminds me of the small boy who took the clock to pieces. When reprimanded, he suddenly turned on his dad and said: "If that is the way you feel, then you put the thing together. I want to play with my soldiers."

We are also grateful for the President's assurance that we have passed the period of experiments and should now be free to invigorate the processes of recovery. This is comforting. And it confirms our belief that millions of our people have had to stand aside for six years in unemployment and destitution to make way for ill-fated experiments . . .

The President's solution of this problem is that the Government spend on a still larger scale. These nine billion expenditures and a promise of 50 billion debt are the most startling budget proposals ever laid before the American people in peace-time . . .

An ancient statesman advised that the art of politics was to find new names for policies that had become unpopular. Mr. Lincoln would probably have phrased this as the art of fooling part of the people a little longer. So today I suppose we ought to be more cheerful when we know that national spending and deficits have become "investing in prosperity." Extravagance in his last message described some new schools of thought. In fact, several of them. In them all, songs of economic hallucination substitute for the brutal clang of the cash register.

The first grade of this high school of economic romance teaches that we should get back to 80 billions of yearly national income which we once enjoyed under Republican administrations . . . But the President says that inasmuch as our present income is only 60 billions, we only have to spend as if we had 80 billions in order to lift ourselves up to the Republican level . . .

The next higher grade of this new school of budgetary magic seeks to hide these gigantic expenditures by claiming Government loans and public works are investments. On the basis of this hallucination my administration would have shown a surplus of two billion. In fact, the budgets of all administrations for 70 years, except the war years, would have shown a surplus. We would have had such an accumulated surplus today that we would have to build a vacuum to hold it.

The recoverable loans are a relief to the taxpayers, but public works are not a monetary asset to the Government. They are the clothes the Nation wears. And they wear out . . .

The New Deal's third grade of economic make-believe teaches that the entire debt of our national economic system, public and private together, is not larger today than it was in 1929. But that is not all the truth. Public debt is paying for a dead horse. Private debt is buying a live one.

They finally graduate from this school of high finance with the valedictory that expenses cannot be reduced. And this in the face of the fact that yearly for ten years prior to the New Deal, on their basis of accounts and excepting loans since recovered, the expenditures were 3.5 billions instead of nine billions. But that was Republicans.

I should like to see a new school established with some home truths for its curriculum. That school would say that to restore jobs and agriculture the fear of men of their Government and the shackles and taxes upon their energies must be removed in order that free men may have hope and confidence in the future.

That school would say that most of the New Deal measures can be lived down, improved, cured, or reformed, but that these monetary and financial policies may defeat the Nation.

That school would say that some day all this will have to be paid for. If it be through taxes, men and women will be handing their wages to the Government instead of buying things for their own betterment.

Nor is that the most important consequence is should teach. That school would say one of the deadly causes of destruction to 20 democracies in 20 years has been Government spending and inflation. Mr. Roosevelt says "this generation has a rendezvous with destiny." The most probable spot for that rendezvous today is inflation. When this generation has gone up that alley it will find freedom has gone, and our rendezvous will be with a full-sized dictator. . . .
